WAR TENSION SPREADS TO PACIFIC

HITLER STEPS UP HIS RAIDS UPON SHIPPING

SUPPLY LANES OF BRITISH SUFFER SEVERE BLOWS

(By The Associated Press)

Berlin, Feb. 13—The destruction of 13 armed merchantmen by German warships in the Atlantic was officially announced today under circumstances suggesting that the Germans were gathering their resources for the most violent campaign against British shipping ever attempted.

The action—which some Nazis called "probably the most successful attack on a convoy in naval history"—was pictured here as the opening phase of an unprecedented challenge to the convoy system and to Britain's control of the seas.

Loaded Vessels Lost

Among the 13 vessels knocked out, said the high command, were "several large trans-Atlantic steamers which were loaded to capacity with war material for England."

(The German radio, in a broadcast heard in the United States, declared that 29,500 tons of ships had been sunk outright and 20,000 tons set afire or badly damaged.)

The scene of the action was not given, but the high command described it as a continuation of a running offensive begun last Sunday west of Portugal, when submarines supported by bombing planes were declared to have knocked out 24,500 tons of ships.

The official German news agency DNB summarized operations for the week of Feb. 4-11 by saying that of 117,500 tons of British sunk during that period, 73,500 tons were sent to the bottom by the German navy.

Suez Canal Damaged

Forty thousand tons were attributed to a merchant raider—which was not identified—"operating overseas," and 33,500 tons to submarine. The air force was credited with the remaining 44,000 tons.

With all this was released an official recapitulation of "several" Nazi air attacks against Britain's vital Suez Canal—attacks which the high command asserted had damaged canal embankments, railroad tracks and port facilities and left two sunken ships lying in the canal to cause "a severe paralyzation of ship traffic."

Military commentators praised the developing system of cooperation between long-distance planes and submarines, saying this tactic would soon reduce Britain's imports to the danger point.

Aircraft have been ranging to Iceland, they added, and almost into mid-Atlantic, and are becoming increasingly effective in directing subs to convoys. Slow moving

MICHIGAN BEAN OFFERED ARMY

Soldier Complains, and State Is Ready to Balance Diet

Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—If the soldiers in Uncle Sam's expanded army aren't getting all the beans they are worth—and at least one sergeant says they're not—Michigan would like to remedy the situation.

A complaint against alleged lack of beans in the army diet was submitted by Leo D. Cline, president of the Michigan Bean Shippers Association, of Saginaw, to Senator Brown (D-Mich), who promptly relayed it to Major General E. B. Gregory, army quartemaster general.

Cline quoted from a letter written by Sergeant Jay C. Ostrander, training with the National Guard at Fort McClellan, Ala., to his parents at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., requesting that "next time you send a box put a can of beans in it. We don't get any here."

Cline suggested that his organization could well supply this sergeant and other soldiers with "one of the most economical, best-balanced foods that can be purchased" (you guessed it, beans!) and at the same time "help a section of the population that needs every bit of support it can be given."

City Halts Digging For Treasure Chest Located By Spirits

Los Angeles, Feb. 13. (AP)—If Christopher Columbus's log and treasure chest are beneath a Los Angeles city sidewalk, as John H. Ryan says a spirit told him, they are going to stay there.

The board of public works refused Ryan permission today to use dynamite to blast through the hard pan that has halted his hand digging.

The board forfeited Ryan's $50 bond, together with an additional $14 to pay for filling up the eight-foot hole and replacing the sidewalk.

Traffic Toll

Saginaw, Mich., Feb. 14. (AP)—A young woman was killed and three companions were injured when their automobile ran off the road and hit a tree near Vassar tonight.

Ethel Gasmon, about 18, of Vassar, was dead upon admittance to St. Luke's hospital here. Robert Anderson, 17, the driver, suffered head injuries, while Emo Allen, 18, was reported in critical condition from chest and head injuries.

Betty Gawne, 18, suffered shock. The injured, all residents of Vassar, were treated at St. Luke's hospital.

STRIKERS GET REBUKE FROM VAN WAGONER

NATIONAL DEFENSE ORDERS TIED UP IN 2 PLANTS

Lansing, Feb. 13 (AP)—The state and federal government moved swiftly tonight in an attempt to end a strike of 2,500 employes of the Motor Wheel Corporation which tied up national defense orders in two factories.

Governor Van Wagoner criticized the strikers, members of the United Automobile Workers (AFL) for "violating" an agreement to continue working while negotiations were in progress.

He urged the workers to return to their jobs "so that our country's national defense program will not be placed in jeopardy." He said he was informed 40 per cent of the Motor Wheel's production went into materials "vital" to defense.

Federal Agents Called

At Van Wagoner's request, agents of the federal concilliation service were enroute to Lansing by airplane from Washington for a conference with a special mediation commission the governor appointed last month.

Union officials said the strike began as a "spontaneous" walkout of day shift workers in plant No. 2, and later was authorized for the entire factory by Edward Donahue, international representative of the union.

Stoppage of production closed the Centrifugal Fusing Company, with 175 employes, which depends on Motor Wheel for its output.

The strikers put a picket line estimated by police officers at more than 1,000 around the plant during the day, but by late afternoon it had dwindled to approximately 50.

Agreement Violated

Van Wagoner said the company planned to recall employes willing to work "but production details make the exact date uncertain" and declared "those who want to work can and will be protected by state police."

"The special mediation commission had a definite agreemnt with the union representatives that a strike would not be called while negotiations were still pending," Van Wagoner said. "The union representatives have violated that agreement, my special commission informs me. Labor unions cannot expect to have the support of their state government or of the people of Michigan when they do not live up to their word."

The special commission was appointed when the union filed a 30-day notice of intention to strike. That notice expired Tuesday at midnight.

Closed Shop Refused

Cause of the strike notice, the commission said, was the company's refusal to grant a union shop request. Other phases of a new contract were reported to be agreeable to both parties.

Van Wagoner said the company told him it could not agree to a "closed shop" because it would be prevented from selling its products to other concerns having

FRANCO WINDS UP WAR TALKS

Petain Last On List; Reply to Mussolini Remains Mystery

(By The Associated Press)

Montpellier, France, Feb. 13—Generalissimo Franco of Spain rounded out a series of Spanish-Italian-French conferences on the future course of Mediterranean events today in a three-hour talk with his old-time military schoolmaster, Marshal Petain of France.

Franco came here from a long parley with Premier Mussolini in Italy, following which Spanish and Italian communiques reported a complete "identity of views" on the future course of their Fascist and Falangist regimes in the war.

In some political quarters it was believed he had been invited by Mussolini to discuss either direct Spanish military assistance in an attempt to reduce Britain's Gibraltar, or free passage to axis troops bent on putting a stopper in the western Mediterranean against the British fleet.

In others it was suggested Mussolini sought an escape for his troops in Libya by way of French and Spanish Morocco.

France, as a Mediterranean power bordering on Spain, naturally had been consulted.

The important question was what Franco had replied to Mussolini.

One-Man Airedale Flown To Master Dies In Army Camp

Monterey, Calif., Feb. 13 (AP)—There were rabbits outside; there were trees and bones—everything for which a dog's heart could wish.

But the aging heart of Laddie could stand no more today, and the dog whose grief touched a nation sighed and died.

Laddie was the inconsolable, one-man airedale left on a Chanute, Kas., farm when the army called his master, Private Everett Scott, with whom he was re-united four days ago after a 2,000-mile airplane race with death.

He died at the army veterinary hospital, in the cushioned box he had left briefly for a few wobbly steps.

Outside was Winkey, a huge St. Bernard, gnawing a bone. Transfusions of Winkey's blood had kept Laddie alive the last few days. In fact, it appeared for a time that aid from Winkey and others of the 75 canine mascots at the fort might save Laddie's life.

Soldiers Hold Funeral

Scott was on duty at Fort Ord when his friend died. He was called to headquarters.

"Laddie died," an officer told him. Scott was silent for a moment.

"I'm sorry to hear it," he said slowly. "It's pretty tough to lost an old and faithful friend." He was given the rest of the day off.

The entire 7th division at Fort Ord had made ready to appoint him their official mascot just the same.

Now, instead, Company G of the 17th Infantry, to which Scott is attached, will hold a simple funeral for the old dog.

A failing heart, old-age and anemia were given as causes of Laddie's death.

DISPUTE DENIED ON DESTROYERS

Question of Sending Ten A Month to Britain Is Unanswered

Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—Leaving unanswered the question whether Britain may get more American destroyers, the White House insisted tonight that there was no controversy on the issue among President Roosevelt, Secretary Knox and Wendell L. Willkie.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, told reporters:

"There is no controversy between the president and the secretary of the navy or Mr. Willkie."

There was this chain of events behind his words:

Willkie had testified before the senate foreign relations committee, at hearings on the British aid bill, that the United States should send England 5 or 10 destroyers a month.

Knox said the navy could not spare them.

Willkie then asserted he had learned from high authorities, after he had given his testimony, that America could send more destroyers to England. The only "high authority" he consulted after his appearance before the senate committee was President Roosevelt.

While declaring no controversy existed, Early declined to say whether the president, Knox or Willkie were agreed that more destroyers should or should not be transferred to the British.

Big Jewish Ghetto In Amsterdam May Be Plan Of Nazis

(By The Associated Press)

Amsterdam (via Berlin), Feb. 13—German authorities ordered all gentiles out of the old Jewish quarter of Amsterdam around Waterloo Square today, raising the possibility of a moated ghetto of 50,000 inhabitants.

The German order, it was stated, was the result of street fighting in which Dutch Nazis and armed opponents from Waterloo Square clashed on February 9, and of a series of drubbings which the Jews gave Nazis in that district in the ensuing two days.

It is estimated that about half of Amsterdam's 100,000 Jews live in the Waterloo Square district. The population of Amsterdam is about 800,000. Traffic to and from the Waterlool Square district can be controlled by raising or lowering canal drawbridges.

Dog Bites May Be Costly In Colorado

Rep. Michael D. McDonald is co-sponsor of a bill providing that a dog's owner shall be liable for damages "suffered by the person bitten, regardless of the former viciousness of such dog."

SENATE SEEKS QUICK ACTION ON ARMS BILL

MEASURE EXPECTED TO PASS IN LESS THAN 2 WEEKS

BY RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Feb. 13, (AP)—The senate foreign relations committee approved the lease-lend bill, 15 to 8, today and urged its passage with an assertion that it "is not a war measure, but a practical safeguard aimed at keeping out of war."

Making a formal report to the senate, the committee majority said the welfare of the nation can best be served by a foreign policy based upon the two fundamental principles that:

"The United States must strive in all ways reasonably possible to stay at peace with all the world; and the United States must, in its own interests, supply effective material aid to those countries whose defense is vital to our defense."

Congress Holds Purse

The report emphasized the majority's view that by an amendment which it added to the bill itself "the power of the congress over the purse strings is retained."

It said that the president could not order the manufacture and delivery of new war materials to Britain without obtaining an appropriation from congress. And it added that the amendment in question "prevents the making of contracts" by the president until they are authorized by congress.

At the same time, the report pointed out that this restriction does not apply to the president's power to ship abroad war materials, already on hand or appropriated for the total of such shipments is otherwise limited to a value of $1,300,000,000.

In addition the committee argued that the bill "contains no violation" of international law.

Lease Power "Desirable"

Turning to the section which authorizes the president to order war materials manufactured and then lease, lend or otherwise dispose of them to countries whose defense he deems vital to that of America, the report said it believed this provision provided the nation's defense with "a wholly desirable and constitutional adaptability to rapidly changing and unpredictable world" conditions.

"In the president, the chief executive and commander-in-chief of our armed forces," it continued, "there is reposed a power to negotiate, and to dispose, within limits, of certain of our material resources where they will best serve our defense.

"It is appropriate to state at this point that your committee has given serious consideration to the advisability of amending the bill so as to name specifically all those countries to or for whom defense articles and defense information may be supplied or procured.

"It is the conviction of your

CANADA BUILDS FLYING FIELDS

Project Will Help U. S. Emergency Air Link With Alaska

Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—The problem of getting large numbers of fighter planes to Alaska quickly in an emergency appeared on the way to a solution today when the Canadian government announced that it would build a $9,000,000 chain of flying fields between the United States and her northern territory.

Although no agreement authorizing this country to use the proposed fields was announced, it was assumed widely that American planes would have the privilege if an invasion were threatened or attempted.

Well-informed sources said that seven bases would be constructed and equipped to handle the largest planes. Pointing out that an air route was already available from the United to Edmonton, in Alberta, these sources said the additional fields would provide a route from Edmonton to White Horse in the Yukon. This would put the northern anchor of the Canadian chain within easy reach of the air fields being built in Alaska by the United States Air Corps.

The principal value of the Canadian facilities to Uncle Sam's fighting forces would be to provide means of getting short range fighter planes to Alaska immediately in an emergency, instead of having to ship them by water from west coast ports, as at present.

Yugoslavian Leaders Called In By Hitler

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 14 (Friday)—Reports that Germany is seeking passage for German troops through both Yugoslavia and Bulgaria in order to get at Greece and the eastern Mediterranean shores reached diplomats here early today as Yugoslavia's premier and foreign minister began "request" conferences with the Nazi leadership in Germany.

Diplomatists with usually reliable sources of information in government quarters said Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic and Foreign Minister Alksander Cincar-Markovic will discuss passage of German troops from Rumania through the Yugoslavian railway junction of Nis, thence by rail down the Vardar River valley toward Greece and the important Aegean seaport of Salonika.

There were unconfirmed reports that King Boris of Bulgaria might follow the Yugoslavs to Germany today.

In any event, Sofia dispatches said that Bulgaria, with Italian and German backing, now is trying to get British-allied Turkey to promise not to fight if the Germans start through Bulgaria toward the Dardanelles.

Boris saw Hitler in November, but nothing came of it.

Cvetkovic and Cindar-Markovic flew to Germany Thursday in response to a summons to confer with Hitler, presumably at Berchtesgaden, where the fate of so many European states has been settled.

With tension in the Balkans mounting, German sources in Belgrade openly declared Yugoslavia would cast her lot with the axis "within 10 days."

The absence of any unusual military measures in Yugoslavia was interpreted in diplomatic circles as meaning that, whatever Hitler expects of this country, Yugoslav statesmen are ready to concede.

GREEKS MOVING TOWARD VALONA

Tepeleni Area Given Up By Italians; Key City Is Surrounded

(By The Associated Press)

Athens, Feb. 13—A three-mile advance toward Valona in the bitterly contested southern coastal region of Albania, accompanied by a general attack over a broad central sector where the Italians also yielded ground, was reported in Greek dispatches today.

Greeks said that their repulse of the counter-attacks in the past month had caused the Fascists to fall back to the defensive and prepare a new line running from Valona to Berati.

This apparently means the Italians intend to abandon all the Tepeleni area, where Greek fighters have infiltrated along the mountain ridges until they are on both sides of that key town, Greeks said.

Berati, through which the new line was reported to run, is about 30 miles northeast of Tepeleni and 45 miles south of Tirana, the capital.

Houses And Shops Wrecked By Nazis In London Airraid

London, Feb. 14 (Friday) (AP)—A heavy bomb smashed houses and blew out shopfronts in one London district during a brief Nazi aerial stab at London last night. Some residents were injured severely.

Another low flying raider bombed a town in northeast Scotland, causing some deaths and considerable damage. A fire started by the bombs was put out quickly.

The night raid was London's fifth of the month.

Rockford Veteran New GAR Leader

Lansing, Feb. 13 (AP)—The Grand Army of the Republic state headquarters said today James A. Hamilton of Lansing, 94-year-old Civil War veteran, would become quartermaster general of the G. A. R. national headquarters, succeeding Albert C. Estabrook, of Allegan, who died yesterday in Grand Rapids.

Succeding Estabrook as state commander of the G. A. R. will be Martin J. Warner, 94, of Rockford, a resident of the Michigan Soldiers Home at Grand Rapids.

DETROIT JEWEL THIEF CAPTURED

Football Tackle Halts Robber With $25,000 Worth of Rings

Detroit, Feb. 13 (AP)—Two jewelry salesmen and a lusty lad with a bent for football cooperated today to break up an alleged attempt to steal diomand rings valued at $25,000.

Asking to see rings he had first looked at Wednesday night, a well dressed young man sauntered into the Wright Kay & Co. jewelry store on downtown Woodward avenue. He put three of the rings, together valued at $10,000, on one finger.

Suddenly, said George E. Krueger and Clarence Knorpp, salesmen, the man seized the ring tray, containing $15,000 more in diamond rings, and dashed out the door. He slipped out of his overcoat and kept going as Knorpp grabbed him.

Kreuger and Knorpp raced in pursuit. At an alley-way 19-year-old Emerson Adams, a passerby, helped out. He brought down the fleeing man with a tackle.

All the rings were recovered. The man was booked at police headquarters as Joseph Matthew McGovern, 23, of Middlesex, Mass., and was charged with attempted larceny.

Contracts Awarded For Navy Expansion

Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—Contracts estimated at $20,912,000 for the construction of U. S. naval air stations in Trinidad, British Guiana and Newfoundland were awarded today by the navy department on a cost plus fixed fee basis.

The navy also awarded a contract estimated at $725,000 for construction of a pier at the Boston Mass., navy yard.

LEAVE ORIENT, ADVICE GIVEN TO AMERICANS

AUSTRALIANS FEAR JAPANESE MOVE ON SINGAPORE

By Fred Vanderschmidt
Associated Press Cable Staff

British - Japanese relations in the Pacific are approaching a crucial stage because of Japanese assistance to Nazi sea raiders and Japan's military pressure on Singapore, Britain's Far-Eastern naval fortress, reliable foreign sources said today (Fri.) in Shanghai.

This situation undoubtedly caused the extraordinary warning sounded by Australia's acting Prime Minister A. W. Fadden that "the war has moved into a new stage involving the utmost gravity," these sources said, as well as the U. S. state department's renewed advice to Americans to leave the Orient.

Britain Must Act

Informed circles said the German raiders are being supplied and refueled from Japanese ports, especially Kobe and the mandated islands in the Pacific, and expressed belief the British may be forced to take "extremely important action" to offset their endangered shipping.

Official Japanese comment was lacking in Tokyo on the Australian pronouncement but one Japanese Far-Eastern expert in a newspaper article recommended destruction of British Singapore as the quickest method of ending the Sino-Japanese war, since he contended it would cut the sea channels whereby aid was being given Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

From Sydney to Washington to Southampton the millions who live at war or near it felt the tension. It engulfed southern Europe, troubled so long by fear. Again it touched the lives of the Americans who linger in Japan's orbit; again they were urged to go home.

Battlefront Extended

Washington, immersed in the course through the senate of the aid-for-Britain bill, heard expressions of concern in diplomatic corridors lest Japan, the eastern partner of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis, is ready at long last to make a lightning thrust at Singapore, or Hong-Kong, or the rich, hot, Dutch East Indies, which sit like a padre's hat atop the Australian continent.

The axis drew with heavier strokes its plan for conquest in the south of Europe, the whole length of the Mediterranean; a conquest by which it intends to attempt to snap the back of the British empire. Lending speed was the knowledge that Italy's own empire in Africa is being pulled apart by the tanks of the imperial British army and, on the Mediterranean's other shore, the Greeks are still advancing in Fascist Albania.

With some 600,000 troops jammed into Rumania, Hitler beckon-

Two Van Wagoner Men Approved; Sabotage Bill In Senate

Lansing, Feb. 13 (AP)—Two more of Governor Van Wagoner's appointments, Thomas J. Donahue and Joseph D. Hadley, both of Detroit, won confirmation from the senate today.

Donahue succeeds S. C. Lappin, of Detroit, on the state labor mediations board, while Hadley takes the place of Charles A. Roxborough, of Detroit, on the unemployment compensation appeal board.

The names of both Roxborough and Lappin had been sent to the senate for confirmation by former Governor Dickinson.

The senate placed in position for debate tomorrow a "sabotage prevention" bill revised to meet the objections of labor union leaders.

Penalty Reduced

The senate judiciary committee proposed to reduce penalty clauses in the bill from prison sentences of 10 years and fines of $10,000 to two years and $1,000. The measure would penalize malicious destruction of property vital to national defense, failure to note on inspection any flaws or defects in articles to be used for defense, and would permit closing highways near defense plants and facilities.

A provision declaring the bill should not be used as a weapon against labor unions was broadened to permit strikes and similar steps. A provision permitting factory guards to make arrests was elimiated. The committee also proposed to limit the life of the law to the adjournment of the 1943 legislature.

The senate passed and sent to the house bills permitting the seizure of furnishings used to promote gambling and found by police in raided establishments. It would permit confiscation of money belonging to the establishment.

The chamber also passed and sent to the house bills permitting circuit courts to issue certificates for unrecorded births not under the jurisdiction of probate courts, and to make the third conviction for receiving stolen goods a felony, despite the value of the property involved.

Other bills introduced would:

Appoint a commission to regulate and license cooks and apprentices.

Permit property owners to disconnect lands from cities and villages under certain conditions.

Declare the molestation of any person in peaceful pursuit of his trade or business a felony.

Agent For Rackets Slain In Detroit; Throat Is Slashed

Detroit, Feb. 13 (AP)—The body of Michael Benche, 34, of Hamtramck, whom police identified as an agent for a numbers racket, was found today in an alley with its throat slashed.

Several hours earlier and some 24 blocks away, police said, Benche's automobile, drenched with gasoline, had been set on fire. At still another place they had found his blood-stained overcoat.

Detectives said they had a detailed description of a man in whose company Benche had been seen last night, and that they were investigating whether the slaying might be linked to testimony before the Wayne county grand jury's gambling-graft inquiry.

Wabeno, Wis. Home Fire Fatal To Two

Wabeno, Wis., Feb. 13, (AP)—Archie Harris, 65, and an unidentified lumberjack burned to death today when they were trapped in a blazing home on Kings lake 13 miles east of here.

Eastman said Harris lost his life attempting to arouse a stranger who was sleeping in the loft.

The body was sighted from an airplane by Alfred Sorenson, of the Grand Rapids airport.

Walkouts Halt More U. S. Defense Orders

(By The Associated Press)

Labor disputes developed yesterday (Thursday) at three additional plants working on defense orders.

A walkout of CIO steel workers forced the Youngstown (Ohio) Sheet & Tube company to close down 11 furnaces which have been turning out 3,000 to 4,000 tons of steel a day. About 1,000 men were idle. The union said grievances included "seniority and other problems."

The company's direct defense orders are relatively small, but much of its production goes to other firms filling army and navy orders.

Members of the CIO-United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers struck at the Foster-Wheeler corporation plant, Carteret, N. J., manufacturer of steam generating and refining equipment, which has an undisclosed amount of defense contracts. About 800 workers were affected. Union demands included a 10 percent wage increase and seven holidays annually with pay.

At Lansing, Mich., some 800 employes of the Motor Wheel corporation left their jobs. The company is currently engaged in contract negotiations with the AFL-United Autobobile Workers. A union spokesman said, however, that the walkout was not ordered by the union, and resulted when a foreman accused the men of neglecting their work.

In Washington, the defense commission continued its efforts to effect a settlement of the strike of CIO employes of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing company's Milwaukee plant which has $45,000,000 in army and navy contracts.

The national mediation board appealed to the receiver for the Rutland (Vt.) railroad and representatives of its employes to withhold wage reductions and strike action scheduled for today (Friday), to permit further efforts to reach a settlement without a strike.

Work on army clothing contracts was resumed by the Utica knitting mill, Anniston, Ala., after nearly two weeks' idleness due to a dispute between CIO and AFL textile unions.

LEAVE ORIENT, ADVICE GIVEN TO AMERICANS

Test For Diplomacy

Those grey-clad thousands in Rumania might use Yugoslavia as a military roadway to Greece; they might, simultaneously, pour through Bulgaria to the Dardanelles, Turkey, the Mediterranean, even all the way across the land bridge to the Levant and the Suez. Indeed, it is reported the German troops, disguised none too well, already have infiltrated Bulgaria by the thousands.

Diplomats in Belgrade, Yugoslav capital, heard reports that Germany wants to send troops through both Yugoslavia and Bulgaria to strike at Greece and the eastern Mediterranean shores.

Other reports in Belgrade—lacking confirmation—said King Boris of Bulgaria might go to talk with Hitler after the Yugoslavs see the fuehrer, and dispatches from Sofia said that Bulgaria is attempting to persuade Turkey not to fight if German troops start at the Dardanelles through Bulgaria.

Britain's diplomacy thus was put to a terrific test: Maintenance of Turkey as an ally who will stand staunch and fight, if it comes to that.

Latin Bloc Proposed?

At the other end of the sea that has become so hostile for Italy, little Francisco Franco of Spain, acting somewhat like a messenger of state, talked with Marshal Petain, the chief of state of France and, no doubt, relayed to him the things which Mussolini told him are expected of France and Spain in the making of the "new world order." He saw Mussolini on the Italian Riveria Wednesday.

It may be that Spain and France—the one war-weary and hungry; the other conquered and getting hungry—may be expected to form a Latin bloc to bolster the axis offensive in the Mediterranean with benevolent neutrality in both southwest Europe and North Africa. It may be—some British fear so—that they are expected to provide a roadway for a German land attack on Gibraltar and even supply African bases for axis planes and ships.

More immediately important to Hitler and Mussolini, however, is that the unbeaten French armies in Africa and Syria, on both sies of the Suez Canal, stand immobile, and refrain from aiding Britain.

Invasion Abandoned?

All these possibilities were plain to the war-battered people of Europe, but vastly more intriguing was the spread of alarm in the South Pacific. Few, however, could doubt there was a definite connection with the German-Italian plan to beat Britain to her knees, and not necessarily by an English invasion, either, before American help could make Britain invincible.

The facts were these:

The Australian war advisory council, in a statement to the people of the Commonwealth, declared that "the war has moved into a new stage involving the utmost gravity."

Embassies and consulates of the United States in French Indo-China, China and the Japanese empire for the third time exhorted the few thousand remaining Americans there to make use of available ships to America.

Australia has shown increased anxiety in Japan's steady progress southward. Now it is suggested that indications of an accord between Japan and Soviet Russia, the spinx of European conflict, may have heightened the Pacific alarm.

Through all this tension Germany struck with direct fury at the Atlantic sealanes of the British, and last night Nazi planes pounded British cities again.

The Germans claimed destruction of 13 big armed merchantmen, laden with war supplies from America, in an attack by Nazi warships on a single Atlantic convoy.

It may be that warfare of this sort, many times multiplied, may take the place this spring of the invasion which Britain has worked so hard to meet.

Arrest Of Bridges Scheduled Today

San Francisco, Feb. 13 (AP)—Irvin Wixon, district immigration commissioner, said tonight a warrant of arrest would be served tomorrow on Harry Bridges, west coast longshoremen's leader who must undergo a second deportation hearing starting March 31.

Wixon said bail would be set at $5,000.

In Washington

(By The Associated Press)

The lease-lend bill was approved by a 15 to 8 vote by the senate foreign relations committee. A majority report said "it is not a war measure, but a practical safeguard aimed at keeping out of war."

The White House said "there is no controversy between the president and the secretary of the navy or Mr. Willkie" on the question of turning over more destroyers to Britain.

Congress was asked by the president to provide $35,223,300 immediately for river and harbor improvements as part of the defense program and to authorize contracts for an additional $5,794,000 of work.

The navy department awarded about $20,912,000 worth of contracts for building outpost defenses at British Guiana, Trinidad and Newfoundland.

Diplomatic sources evidenced concern over the possibility of a Japanese attempt at blitzkrieg against British or Netherlands colonies in the Far East. Secretary Hull confirmed that the state department had urged again that Americans in the Far East come home.

Battle Creek Train Wreck Blamed Upon Careless Switchman

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 13 (AP)—Railroad officials blamed the negligence of a switchman for an accident in which a west-bound Michigan Central freight train struck the rear of a switch engine near a crossing here today.

Fifty feet of main line track was torn up, requiring re-routing of Michigan Central traffic over the Grand Trunk lines for four hours. Officials, estimating damage at $2,000, said the crash resulted when a switchman derailed the switch engine as it was backing off the main line. No one was injured.

Miners At Hancock Vote On Contract

Hancock, Mich., Feb. 13, (AP)—Employes of the Quincy Mining Co., who went on strike Tuesday night, will vote tomorrow afternoon on a proposed contract drawn today at a conference of officials of the company and Quincy Copper Workers Union No. 523 (CIO).

Gene Saari, chairman of the union bargaining committee, said the mine may resume operations tomorrow night if the contract is ratified. The terms were not disclosed.

The mine employs 540 men.

committee that such amendment would be unwise. No one today, in our own best interests, can determine definitely whether, for example, Ireland, Brazil, or what parts of north Africa should have our material aid tomorrow, x x x

"Too few of us know the course which wars like those now in progress may take."

Delay Dangerous

(Wendell L. Willkie, in backing the bill with modifications, had suggested an amendment under which American aid would be limited to the British, the Greeks and the Chinese, unless congress later decided to help other countries.)

Administration leaders were hopeful of passing the measure in the senate proper after not more than two weeks' debate.

At the same time, Senator Lee (D-Okla) appealed to the senate for speedy action, asserting that "delay of this bill is as effective as defeat." Because that was so, he said, "every Hitler sympathizer, every appeaser and every fifth columnist in America is trying to stop" the measure.

"They are shouting that its passage would make President Roosevelt a dictator," he continued. "They seem to prefer to have Hitler as a dictator permanently than to trust Roosevelt with emergency powers temporarily."

A little earlier, Senator Austin (R-Vt) proposed that in return for the American help proposed in the bill, England pledge herself to a policy of collaboration with this country in the establishment of the world order which would follow a British victory.

Aims Not Known

He said the London government should be willing to state its "peace aims" and what it intended to do to established a "new sanction for peace" by which disputes would be settled without resort to force. He added:

"She should be willing to commit to us, that hereafter in the Orient when we take a stand we will not be left there holding the bag—that she will not abandon us as in the case of Manchukuo."

(His reference was to Britain's failure to support the strong stand taken by Secretary of State Stimson when Japan invaded Manchukuo.)

In addition, Austin said there should be some British-American understanding regarding a cooperative defense of the Atlantic shores of North and South America.

The committee reported the bill to the senate much as it was received from the house. In all, it adopted three amendments. Each proposed by administration leaders, and turned down a dozen or more efforts by the opposition to impose restrictions of one sort or another upon the powers to be granted to the president. The three amendments adopted were:

(1) The inclusion of a provision that the president receive congressional authorization before entering into contracts for the manufacture of war materials and their delivery to other nations.

(2) The adoption of language under which money received after June 30, 1946, in repayment for war articles leased or loaned would go into the treasury's general fund rather than be used to finance additional assistance to England.

(3) A technical revision of a house proviso that the powers granted to the president may be revoked at any time by the adoption of a concurrent resolution by both houses of congress.

Vandenberg Votes No

The bill empowers the president to order the manufacture of war implements here or elsewhere and to deliver them to other nations, under lease or otherwise. He may send war equipment brought from previous appropriations to a maximum of a $1,300,000,000 valuation. In addition, the bill permits belligerent vessels to make repairs and outfit in American ports, if the president sees fit.

Chairman George (D-Ga) of the foreign relations committee said the amendment requiring congressional approval before the president could make contracts was of great importance because "it retains in congress full control of the purse strings."

Michigan AFL Won't Give Up Strike Rights

Lansing, Feb. 13 (AP)—The Michigan Federation of Labor, in convention here, reaffirmed its "right to strike when necessary" today as one of its largest affiliated unions, the United Automobile Workers, called a strike of about 2,500 employes less than a mile from the convention hall.

A resolution adopted by the convention expressed willingness to arbitrate disputes, eagerness to cooperate in the national defense effort and asserted:

"We reaffirm our determination to pursue a policy of extending and improving the standards of living of the workers through the full use of all our rights, including the right to strike when necessary."

Meanwhile the UAW-AFL formed picket lines around plants of the Motor Wheel corporation.

One of numerous proposals adopted would repeal the state labor mediation law.

The Federation declared the law "inconsistent in attempting to create a voluntary mediation system but also allowing rules that make it compulsory" and unconstitutional on grounds that it deprived workers of the right to leave their employment if they desired.

A resolution adopted by the convention urged President Roosevelt "to draft any business that puts private gain before the national need" and called for enforcement of labor laws in industries with defense orders.

Lengthy controversy and fireworks preceded the adoption of a resolution to create a legal defense department of the Federation to be financed by increasing the per capita tax on members from 2 to 2½ cents a month.

The resolution, adopted by a 97 to 82 vote, was referred to the constitutional committee, and Federation officials explained establishment of the department would require a constitutional amendment.

A firecracker was touched off in the convention hall while the vote was being counted.

Other resolutions advocated:

Opposition to the St. Lawrence waterway, which was described in the resolution as a "fantastic dream."

A boycott of goods produced in Germany, Japan and Italy.

A five-day week in all industries of Michigan.

Establishment of federal camps for migrant workers in Berrien, Van Buren and other counties "where needed" for fruit pickers.

Retirement pensions for state employes.

Union standards for state civil service employes in building trades.

The Federation sent a telegram to the state senate opposing an anti-sabotage bill in its present form.

The next convention will be held in Port Huron.

Count Von Luckner Living Peacefully, Not As Sea Raider

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—Count Felix von Luckner is living a peaceful life in a log cabin in the Harz mountains in Germany—far from the south seas where sailors from destroyed ships have reported him as operating—Lowell Thomas said today.

In a statement issued by the National Broadcasting Company, Thomas said that he received a letter from Von Luckner, dated Jan. 1 in Halle, Germany. It was Jan. 2 that the count was reported active as a raider in the Pacific.

Survivors of ships sunk recently by German raiders reported that one of the vessels was commanded by a "Captain von Lucknow," who some believed to be Von Luckner, credited with sinking 25 vessels in the World War.

Rushton Will Not Test Appointments Made By Dickinson

Lansing, Feb. 13 (AP)—Attorney General Herbert J. Rushton said today he would not bring suit in the supreme court to test the right of the senate to confirm appointments to state offices made by former Governor Luren D. Dickinson.

Rushton previously gave the senate an opinion it could confirm the Dickinson appointments, and since then the senate has rejected five Democratic appointees of Governor Van Wagoner in favor of the Dickinson slate.

Byron L. Ballard, Governor Van Wagoner's legal adviser, said quo warranto proceedings would be brought in the supreme court on behalf of the rejected appointees and that since Rushton would not act, private counsel would be employed. He said he hoped for a decision in the April term of court.

Texan To Propose Dry Army Camps

Washington, Feb. 13, (AP)—Legislation to prevent the sale of alcoholic beverages in and near military camps was introduced today by Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex) of the senate military affairs committee.

Sheppard is known as the "father of prohibition." His measure would forbid the sale of even 3.2 per cent beer on army, navy and marine reservations and in such adjacent zones as might be defined by the government.

In the house, Rep. Shafer (R-Mich) offered a measure under which persons selling members of the armed forces any beverage containing more than 3.2 per cent of alcohol by volume would face two years imprisonment and a fine of $2,000.

Exiled Spanish King Abdicates; Son Juan In Line For Throne

Lisbon, Feb. 13 (AP)—Alfonso XIII, the Spanish king who fled into exile in 1931 without renouncing his rights to the throne, has now done so in favor of his son and heir, Prince Juan, Portuguese monarchists reported today.

Alfonso, who recently suffered a heart attack in Rome, has drawn up instruments of abdication and Spanish monarchists have notified Generalissimo Franco of Spain, they said. But thus far the nationalist chief of state has not allowed publication of the manifesto in Spain, they said.

Spanish monarchists long have argued that re-establishment of the throne was the only way to bring about nationality unity in Spain, but just how Spain's axis friends and General Franco regard Prince Juan is another matter.

MORE FOREST LANDS SOUGHT

Federal Court Opens Condemnation Proceedings for 120 Acres

Friendly condemnation proceedings have been started in the United States district court for the western district of Michigan to acquire one 80 and two 40-acre tracts of land in Delta county for probable inclusion in the Hiawatha National Forest.

Summonses naming numerous defendants were served at the office of County Clerk P. A. LeClaire by Ray Hill, of Marquette, United States district marshal.

Service of the summonses is required by April 21, and defendants are required to file written notice of appearance or other defense within 15 days after April 21.

The suits are to quiet title and provide a basis for payment by the government, both as to amount and as to division among owners of interest.

The Northwestern Cooperage & Lumber company of Gladstone is made the chief defendant with regard to the 80-acre tract in Masonville township, legally described as T. 43 N., R. 21 W., Section 26: E½-NE¼, about six miles east of Osier near the west branch of the Whitefish river.

Erick M. Johnson of Gladstone is chief defendant in a suit involving 40 acres described as T. 41 N., R. 22 W., Section 26; NW¼-SW¼, a mile and a half north of the Gladstone ski area on the Days river.

Harry Buchman of Rapid River is chief defendant in another 40-acre suit involving T. 42 N., R. 20 W., Section 7; NE¼-NW¼, 11 miles north of Rapid River near the Whitefish road.

LaFramboise Asks Presidential Aid For AuTrain Canal

A joint senate-house resolution requesting support of President Roosevelt for House Bills 2488 and 2490 is to be introduced in the state senate by State Senator Joseph LaFramboise.

The former calls for erection of a United States Veterans' Administration hospital in or near the city of Gladstone while the second provides for an examination and survey of a ship canal connecting Lakes Michigan and Superior.

Both bills were introduced by Rep. Fred Bradley on Jan. 21. The hospital bill was referred to the committee on World war legislation while the canal proposal was referred to the committee on rivers and harbors.

The hospital proposed would be of 150 beds capacity, fully equipped, and would cost an estimated $700,000.

The route of the proposed canal would be from Au Train Lake in Lake Superior to Little Bay de Noquet in Lake Michigan or down the Whitefish river valley.

Senator LFramboise was in the Upper Peninsula last week-end gathering all available information on industrial plants and machinery which might be used in defense contracts. This was secured in seven counties and has been turned over to Lieut. Gov. Frank Murphy to be forwarded to Washington.

Northwestern U. Alumni Observes 90th Anniversary

Northwestern University alumni in Escanaba this week will observe the University's 90th Anniversary by launching the 15th annual Alumni Foundation campaign, according to G. Willard King, Escanaba, president of the Northern Michigan Northwestern Alumni Club.

Purpose of the campaign, which will be opened nationally in Chicago February 19 by a banquet in the Union League Club, is to enlarge the scope of education and research at Northwestern University, and to provide scholarships for outstanding students who need financial help.

Main speaker at the Chicago banquet will be Clarence Addison Dykstra, Director of the Selective Service Administration and President of the University of Wisconsin, who will discuss "American Universities in 1941." Dr. Dykstra is expected to emphasize the role of American Universities in the National Defense program.

Since the Northwestern Alumni Foundation was organized by alumni in 1926, it has contributed almost $1,000,000 to the University, Mr. King said. Besides establishing scholarships, the Foundation has also contributed to the support of Northwestern University dental and medical clinics, libraries, research equipment and faculty members.

Program of the Alumni Foundation is sponsored by the Northwestern Alumni Association, which this month celebrates the 20th anniversary of its founding.

Mrs. William. Ettenhofer, 1114 Tenth avenue south, was admitted for treatment.

Fred Galarno, 924 Sheridan Road, submitted to an operation for relief from appendicitis.

Mrs. Harry Johnson, of Rapid River, was admitted.

City-County Argument On Fines Set for April

A long-standing dispute as to who gets the fines—the city or the county—for convictions on arrests made by city police of Escanaba and Gladstone is going to be settled this spring.

At least city and county authorities are agreed that they will do all they can to bring a decision in as friendly a way as possible. The case is scheduled to be taken before the April term of circuit court here for a judgment by Judge Frank A. Bell.

$8,000 Involved

But someone will lose that case and whether it be the city or the county, the matter probably will be appealed to the state supreme court for a ruling, representatives of both sides indicated.

The county's case will be presented by County Prosecutor J. Clyde McGonagle and the city's by City Attorney Denis McGinn of Escanaba and Glenn W. Jackson of Gladstone.

Involved is about $8,000, with Escanaba the defendant in a suit for collection of $6,000 of the amount. The county charges that this is due the county in fine moneys held by the city which, the county says, should have been paid to the county. The money would go largely to the school library funds of the townships.

The case covers a six year period, dating as far back as the statute of limitations will allow. But the alleged mis-practice with regard to these funds has been going on for 15 years or more, according to Atty. McGonagle.

The case was first filed last summer, but has lagged through three sessions.

Municipal Court?

Atty. McGonagle is pressing for a solution, because he says, he is being pressed by others to determine whether the county will get not only the back funds but those that are accruing almost daily.

In Escanaba, at least, the crux of the matter lies in technicalities of legal warrants which put charges against violators. If such papers charge violation of a city ordinance, then the city is entitled to the fine money. If violation of a state law is charged, then the county is entitled to it.

Both state law and city ordinance cover the same offenses in many cases. The county holds that if a transgressor is able to pay a fine, the city charges him with ordinance violation; if he is broke, he is charged with state law violation and he is sent to the county jail.

The city has not formally admitted this, but has not denied it very strongly. The city defends its practice by saying that the city pays more than half of the county taxes and should be entitled to some compensation.

There is a possibility that a decision adverse to Escanaba would bring establishment of a municipal police court. All city police cases would be tried in that court and the fines would support the system.

But then, everything may be ironed out smoothly somehow before it comes to this.

Unseasonal Rain Keeps City Crews Busy On Streets

The unseasonal thaw and steady drizzling rain which fell most of the day Thursday kept city street department Supt. Joe Holmes and a crew of eleven men busy opening catch basins in the heavily flooded areas, eliminating miniature lakes and rivers.

All of Ludington street's basins were opened early yesterday afternoon as well as others in sections where the rain and melted snow caused the most trouble.

If the rain and soft weather continues today, more men will be put to work promptly to prevent overflows from plugged basins in the flooded areas, Holmes said.

Warmest Feb. 13

Yesterday was the warmest February 13 in Escanaba since 1928, W. T. Lathrop, observer for the United States weather bureau here, reported. The high reading yesterday was 37 in mid-morning. Feb. 13, 1928, brought a reading of 38 and the same figure was reached on that date in 1919, Mr. Lathrop said. A 36 reading was recorded for the date in 1935.

The saddest weather news for the day was in the form of .34 of an inch of rain and the consequent disappearance of three inches of snow in less than 24 hours. There were six inches on the level Wednesday, three inches last night.

Escanaba's Defense Role Is Given Study

BY JOHN J. HEIMBURGER

Washington, D. C. (WNS)—Escanaba's role in defense production seems slated to be that of helping to provide the raw materials which will be fabricated in more populous industrial centers into articles of defense, a survey of the defense agencies in Washington indicates.

Many of the materials either produced in Escanaba, or in the Upper Peninsula area and shipped through Escanaba should be in increasing demand for defense purposes.

Lumber, which builders in many parts of the country are already having difficulty in securing fast enough to complete housing contracts on time, is certain to be in even greater demand in the next few months.

The War Department's building program is well under way—as far as camps and cantonments are concerned—but the general housing program in military and industrial defense areas is just getting under way.

Contract 14,000 Houses

Last week Defense Housing Coordinator Charles F. Palmer allocated 34 new defense housing programs totalling more than 14,000 houses. Virtually every one of these will be made of lumber, as speed in construction and low cost is required.

Other housing projects are springing up all over the country in areas where workers are concentrated about new defense industries.

The demand for hardwood of various types for use in the fleets of automotive equipment included in the defense program is certain to increase many fold. In addition both hardwood and veneer will be used in construction of trailers—or "mobile housing", as housing officials prefer to call them—which are going to be used in vastly increased numbers to house defense workers.

Most of the greately augmented production of trailers will be taken up by private purchasers. Under a bill introduced in Congress last week at the request of housing authorities, however, approximately 1,000 trailers of a new and larger type are to be purchased directly by the government for emergency industrial housing.

Location of a major defense plant in the Escanaba area is considered improbable. In many ways—such as transportation, accessability of raw materials, and inland location—Escanaba is well situated for a defense plant of some kind.

Experience indicates, however, that availability of skilled labor is one of the most vital requirements of defense industrial location. Where adequate supply of skilled labor is not available it must somehow be imported and this brings up not only the problem of finding it but of providing housing and all the facilities for education, recreation and social life, which a colony of workers imported into an area requires.

"Farming Out" Possible

Some direct share in industrial production may fall to plants in the Escanaba area under two recently declared policies. Increased effort to pursuade major defense contractors to "farm out" certain work to sub-contractors is being made.

Every indication is that pressure in this direction will increase. Many small manufacturing plants—which cannot possibly bid on large government contracts—have complained to Washington that they are being "frozen out." Army and Navy officials, eager to get equipment with all possible speed, have demanded that large contractors sub-contract work which smaller plants can do so as to save precious time.

More spread of work in this fashion is anticipated in future contracts and should begin to show appreciably in smaller industrial centers in the near future.

Will Build Small Boats

The second policy which should give the Upper Peninsula region some direct part in the defense program is the announced intention of the Navy of building all the auxiliary craft it can on the Great Lakes.

Pending before Congress now, and seemingly assured of early passage, is a measure which will appropriate some $360,000,000 for approximately 280 auxiliary Naval craft. In a recent press conference Secretary Knox promised that every one of these boats which could be built in the Great Lakes would be built there. This bill, when it passes, will carry about $25,000,000 for plant expansion for construction of the vessels.

CHARLES FISH HAS RETIRED

C&NW Conductor Worked for Railway Almost Fifty Years

Charles Fish, 68, Menominee, former resident of Escanaba, has retired as freight and passenger conductor on the Chicago and North Western railroad after almost a half century of service. Mr. Fish, who has been in failing health, worked last on Dec. 8.

Mr. Fish has been in the employ of the North Western railway for nearly 50 years and was promoted to a passenger conductor in 1923. Since 1922, he has worked on trains running between Green Bay, Menominee and Ishpeming. Twenty months ago, after the death of his wife, Mr. Fish moved to Menominee to live and since that time had been a conductor on No. 224 and No. 210 trains running between Menominee and Green Bay.

A long-time resident of Green Bay, Mr. Fish plans to return to that city this week to reside with his son, Albert Fish. He is a brother of the late George Fish, also a passenger conductor on the North Western road, who died in Menominee Dec. 5, 1939.

Begin Trucking Of Lumber for City WPA Dock Project Today

Lumber to be used on the city WPA dock building project which will be started about May 1 will begin to be trucked today from the Bark River tract, one of several sites where the 340,000 feet of logs needed for sheeting and piling on the dock are being cut, A. M. Aronson, city engineer, said yesterday.

Hauling of both the sheeting and piling is being done by the same trucker who was low bidder on both hauling projects.

The lumber will be stored between the city pumping station and the ball diamond on the point until it is needed on the dock project.

The sawing equipment will be moved on Saturday to the tracts at Stonington where logs have been cut on four 40-acre tracts owned by Benjamin Skaug. Trees blown down in the November 11-12 storm on ten 40-acre tracts in the Hiawatha Forest which the Forest Service has permitted the city to cut, will also be sawed. Many of these trees are being trimmed to be used for piling.

U. P. MINING AT TOP SPEED

New Ore Shipping Mark Anticipated During 1941 Season

Ishpeming, Mich — With iron mining company executives unanimous in their belief that 1941 will see a new Great Lakes ore shipping record, properties on the Marquette range are operating at full speed in preparation for the season's opening.

For the first time in many years, according to those executives, there has been none of the recession commonly experienced in the industry after the last cargo has gone down the lakes in the fall.

70 Million Tons Seen

Looking forward to the opening of the 1941 shipping season with full realization that the date when the first boat is loaded in the spring may materially influence the total tonnage carried down the lakes, there is general expectation that at least 70 million tons will be shipped.

The previous all-time high of 65,205,000 tons was set in 1929.

Usually, a let-down at the mines follows the season's close. There is no hustle or rush for delivery, although normal production is maintained and the usual maintenance work is carried out on surface and underground.

However, with steel production at near capacity rates, all ore properties this winter have maintained a schedule of making available the largest possible tonnage at the outset of the 1941 season.

Consumers are querying mines on how much they will be able to produce, reversing the usual procedure of producers asking consumers for an estimate of their needs.

Idle Mines Reopen

Several long-idle mines have been reopened; many properties have raised their employment schedule. Only last month the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company, largest producer on the Marquette range, put all its soft ore mines in the county on a six-day-a-week schedule. Earlier it had placed the Cliffs shaft, a hard ore property, on the same working basis.

Weather for the next five weeks will determine the opening date and the possibility of surpassing the 1929 record. The average opening is April 21. In 1902 the steamer F. R. Buell came into port on April 6—the earliest date in history. The latest was on May 14, 1885. Twice during the last decade navigation has been delayed until May; on May 2 in 1936 and on May 3 in 1934.

Coach Is Slightly Damaged In Mishap

A light coach driven by Mrs. Emyral Polkey, of Wells, was slightly damaged yesterday morning when it was struck by a delivery truck driven by Dave Charland, 605 South Tenth street, at the corner of First avenue north and North Eleventh street.

Mrs. Polkey was driving north on Eleventh street, stopped at the arterial. Charland was driving east on First avenue north, turned south on Eleventh street, striking Mrs. Polkey's car which was stopped just left of the center of the crosswalk. The truck was not damaged.

An Interesting Suit

IT will be an interesting suit that unconfirmed appointees of Governor VanWagoner will institute in the state supreme court, according to reports from Lansing on Wednesday. The suit will challenge the right of the Michigan state senate to name nominees submitted to that body by former Governor Luren D. Dickinson, to state jobs, in preference to appointees nominated by the present governor.

Atty. Byron L. Ballard, personal legal advisor to Governor VanWagoner and now apparently serving as counsel for a group of five disappointed VanWagoner appointees, has announced that Atty. General H. J. Rushton, of Escanaba, will first be requested to file suit in the supreme court, to test the right of the senate to consider appointments to state posts, other than those nominated by the present governor. The news story from Lansing indicates that no one expects the attorney general to serve in any action that would in any way challenge the right of the Republican controlled senate to confirm nominations made by the retiring governor. In fact, it very likely will be found that Atty. General Rushton has already advised senate leaders of their right to consider such appointments and if a suit is filed by private counsel, retained by the disappointed appointees, the attorney general will be found serving as counsel for the senate committee, rather than against that body.

Another Link

TIME and circumstance are drawing the two Americas closer together. Whatever happens as a result of the war in Europe, North and South America and the Central America that connects them, are being more closely united by new bonds almost every day.

Closing of European markets is forcing the American nations into trade relationships which might have taken years to develop under normal circumstances. Many of these require adjustments that may become permanent, will remain even when Europe comes back into the trade picture. For example, if the United States equips itself to smelt Bolivian tin, trade should become permanent in that metal between the two countries. If Brazil rehabilitates its rubber industry, this, too, might form a permanent trade link, no matter what happens in Europe or Asia. Many changes and adjustments are being made which, once made and found good, will be hard to dislodge.

Quietly but steadily, Canada is moving into the orbit of the western hemisphere. Most Americans of the United States do not realize that even today, as a result of changes made after the World War, Canada is an independent nation.

That independence will be even more marked after this war, again regardless of its result. Now Canada puts an exclamation point after both its independence and its hemisphere interests by exchanging ministers with Argentina and Brazil; Chile and other South American countries are expected to follow suit. These direct diplomatic links to the southern part of the hemisphere will serve to bind Canada still closed to its destinies, and give her a more active part in shaping them.

It has long been proposed that Canada become one of the nations of the Pan-American Union. This, too, appears to be a development that is merely a matter of the time and the occasion. Canada has large interests in South America, and many of her people have gone there. Canada's increasing industrialization suggests that it may well increase those interests, as it did not long ago in building a new airplane factory in Mexico.

Just as it is only a question of time until it will be possible to drive a car on a single highway from Alaska to the Argentine, so one day all the peoples from Yukon Territory to Patagonia will perfect the machinery of living together until it shall be an example to the world.

Religion and Education

LEXICOGRAPHERS deplore the written expression "and/or," and so do we, but it does seem an apt way to describe the interesting experiment now going on in the New York public schools. Eighteen schools have been selected; parents may designate their children in those schools as candidates for religious instruction; the designated children are then excused an hour early one day a week to go to nearby churches, Catholic, Protestant and Jewish, where religious instruction has been prepared for them by those churches. About 2500 boys and girls of primary grade are now participating.

The experiment is being watched by many communities throughout the country to determine whether it may hold the answer to insistent demands for more religious training for children, without breaking down traditional American separation of church and state functions.

Savings Increasing

FOR the seventh consecutive year, savings deposits of the banks of the United States have increased.

Last mid-summer they reached the stupendous total of $25,750,050,0000 There were 45,791,265 accounts, and while that does not mean the same number of depositors, since some people have more than one account, it certainly suggests that savings are more widely distributed among the people than some would have us think.

This gives a clew to the funds the government proposes to tap if it begins to float war loans in the manner of 1917-19. For this is money on deposit, actually in existence, and if borrowed by the government for bonds, it does not increase the amount of money and thus tend toward inflation, as would borrowing from banks which simply creat a bookkeeping credit. It is another glimpse of the defensive sinews of this great country.

"NEGOTIATED PEACE"
(The New Republic)

Much that Colonel Lindbergh says is true. The Germans are extremely powerful; it will probably take a long and heroic effort to defeat them by force of arms. Much suffering would be avoided if it were possible to negotiate a peace. And it is unlikely indeed that Hitler would try to invade this country by air or otherwise as soon as the war in Europe ceased.

Colonel Lindbergh's imagination, however, does not soar very far in exploring the implications of what he proposes. Take, for instance, the words, "negotiated peace." . . .

The terms of the Franco-German armistice were "negotiated." Hitler is master of Europe; even Greece maintains her independence, only by virtue of the fact that she keeps on fighting. He has an undefeated army, which is immensely more powerful than any other. He has an air force which outnumbers all rivals. The British know that if they stopped fighting now, Hitler could impose his will on them. Never again would they dare to ignore his demands, whether abroad or at home. He certainly would leave them no means of successful opposition. Freedom and the home of democracy would be lost to them. The British will never ask to negotiate with Hitler unless they are hopelessly defeated. What Colonel Lindbergh is proposing, therefore, is that we help convince the British they have no chance, and so extinguish the last spark of opposition to a totalitarian Europe. . . .

And has the Colonel thought about Asia? Decision of the war in Europe automatically decides the balance of forces there. China holds out because of the hope of Western pressure on Japan. She could expect nothing more from Britain. We should be compelled to withdraw in order to face eastward. The Netherlands East Indies and Singapore would go.

And what about Latin America? There are plenty of native interests, and a large population of Germans and Italians, who would hasten to make use of the jump in Axis prestige. South America normally finds great markets in Europe, and it is full of undeveloped resources that a victorious Germany would lose no time in exploiting. It would not take long for Hitler to extend his influence there. That influence could not be successfully challenged by any Latin-American nation without armed assistance from us. But if we tried to fight south of the Equator, we should do so with resources of materials, manufacture, man power and shipbuilding far inferior to Hitler's, and farther from our bases than he would be from his.

The United States would be, for the first time in its history, genuinely isolated.

THOSE 96,500 DEATHS
(Milwaukee Journal)

J. E. Donnelly writes, after reading the statistics of the National Safety council, that "the national guard ought to be on our highways protecting the people."

He means, of course, that in face of the appalling accident record almost any drastic measure in behalf of greater safety would be justified.

The figures show that 96,500 persons died from all types of accidents in the United States in 1940. Of these, 34,400 died in motor vehicle accidents. Nearly as many—more than 32,000—died in "home" accidents. Some 15,000 died in public vehicle, but not motor vehicle mishaps, and 17,000 in industrial accidents.

Obviously "something should be done about it" but just what still isn't clear. As Mr. Donnelly says, perhaps "the national guard" or an adequate police force ought to be placed upon the highways. Such a force might save many of the next 34,400 potential victims of traffic smashups.

The trouble is that a glance at the deaths due to accidents in and about homes rather deflates the notions that intensive traffic control alone is the real answer. If 34,000 died on the highways, but 32,000 died amid the presumably tranquil and safe confines of their home grounds, where does the fault lie?

Considering motor vehicle deaths alone, the answer reasonably might be: The fault lies in heedless driving—in careless or reckless men who catapult cars over the highways. But when the accidental home deaths also are considered, the fault seems to lie deeper than any police power could reach.

Men cannot be "policed" against falling off ladders, slipping in bathtubs or getting burned by the cook stove, furnace or incinerator.

The question then rises: How effectively can they be "policed" against skidding their cars on the highways, overrunning curves, or toppling into the ditch?

Obviously, Wisconsin and all other states need adequate traffic police forces. This state ought to add more men, as it can afford them, to patrol the roads. Recklessness would be curbed, traffic deeaths thus reduced in numbers.

But policing alone evidently isn't the whole answer when more than 32,000 out of 96,000 accidental deaths are due to what might be called "the human factor."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY PEARSON AND ALLEN

Washington—If you could open a certain door to a private conference room in the War Department, you would get a dramatic picture of aid to Britain. Here there is no debate of pros and cons. Here, aid to Britain is already in action.

It is a meeting of the Tank Committee, made up of ordnance experts of the War Department plus U. S. manufacturers of tanks; and in addition, representatives of the British Purchasing Commission.

All are sitting in the same room. Purpose of the Tank Committee is to help the British, and nobody makes any bones about it.

On walking into the room, you might suppose the remarks of the generals and business leaders are being broadcast for the public, because microphones are placed all along the conference table. But the "mikes" are solely for recording the conversations for confidential files. Stenographers take shorthand notes, and a recording machine takes down every word spoken during two and a half hours of discussion.

The discussion deals with coordination of industry in the production of tanks — for Britain. The presiding officer is Brigadier General G. M. Barnes of the U. S. Army, but it is the British interest that is served.

—COMPLETE INDUSTRIAL COOPERATION—

Half a dozen manufacturers of tanks are present—four of them producing tanks for the British, the others giving advice. All cooperate, opening their books, lending plans, offering to supply parts. The old concept of competition is forgotten. These companies may be keen rivals in other fields, but here there is no rivalry.

First, the British order of $200,000,000 must be filled. Lying ahead, in the wide open spaces of the lease-lend bill, are limitless orders—more tanks than any country ever saw, including Germany. Why talk of competition?

The room is quiet, save for the one voice speaking. The microphone carries his words to the slowly revolving disc. A production manager of Baldwin Locomotive or Bethlehem Steel is telling the representative of Pullman Standard or Pressed Steel Car that he has plenty of this part or that, or he can supply extra parts in return for another part he is not tooled up to make.

It is a great pooling of industrial effort, an effort to produce in high gear as many tanks as the British can ship across the Atlantic. And what is most significant — these are tanks to carry the war to the Continent — tanks by which Britain will take the offensive.

—"I WILL NOT SPARE"—

Senator Joe Guffey is giving this explanation of why the Bible was supposedly dropped when Chief Justice Hughes administered the inaugural oath for Roosevelt's third term.

"By mistake," says the Senator from Pennsylvania, "the Bible was opened at Second Corinthians, 13th chapter, where Paul says:

" 'This is the third time I am coming to you . . . . I told you before, and foretell you . . . that, if I come again, I will not spare.' "

—UNDER THE DOME—

Even before the lend-lease bill was out of committee, Senators began to tangle in debate on the floor . . . . Old Tom Connally of Texas (pro), challenged young Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts (con) . . . . Joe Martin, House Republican leader, visited the Senate to hear the fireworks . . . . Ample girthed Tom Heflin of Alabama sat on the sidelines, wishing he were back in the Senate . . . . South Dakota's mute Senator Bulow listened part of the time, chewed tobacco all the time . . . . Senator McKellar of Tennessee broke in, to talk about the postal service . . . . Ralph Brewster of Maine itched to get into it, but decided a freshman Senator should hold his peace.

—GOP vs. WILLKIE—

It is supposed to be a dark secret, but Republican circles are churning over reports that certain GOP big shots inspired a clique of Young Republicans to oppose Wendell Willkie at the recent convention in Des Moines.

To be specific, the GOP leaders who are opposing Willkie are:

Joe Pew, of the Sun Oil family and long time financial angel of Pennsylvania Republicanism.

Ernest Weir of Pittsburgh, head of the Weirton Steel Company and a row of iron and steel corporations which have been embroiled in feuds with organized labor.

Herbert Hoover, who never did enthuse over Willkie, and whose isolationist views were given a severe jolt by Willkie's trip to London.

There are even reports that one of the above went to the extent of contributing cash to pay the expenses of certain Young Republican leaders to Des Moines in order to lead an attack on Willkie. The attack, however, failed. The Des Moines meeting ended by passing a resolution approving Willkie's position.

The cleavage illustrates the basic difference which has existed in the Republican Party for some time, and which Willkie, at least during his campaign, partially healed. One group, the Old Guarders, stand on the policies of Hoover and Taft. The other group, represented by Willkie and most Young Republicans, would accept the majority of New Deal reforms, but improve on them.

Hollywood Column

La Flamme, you might say, is burning brightly. It's no secret that she was unhappy about the choice of a director, Rene Clair, and a leading man, Bruce Cabot. She had other preferences in both cases, and Miss Dietrich is very choosey indeed about everything that goes on in connection with her pictures. Unless restrained, she will boss the direction, the cinematography, the still pictures and the publicity.

"Rudy," she will say to Rudolph Mate, a celebrated cameraman, "that dinky" (pointing to a small spotlight) "should be tilted here, to strike me so. And with a filter, Rudy." Ever since her apprenticeship under Josef von Sternberg she has been convinced that she knows more about lighting technique than anybody else in town. She poses her own still pictures by arranging herself before a large mirror.

So far as I know, she is just about the only actress who wouldn't be happy to relax in the cinematic embrace of the romantic, reformed heavy, Cabot. And Rene Clair, so far as Hollywood is concerned, is the most important by-product of Hitler's romp into France. It's a pleasure to watch Clair's handling of dramatic and other situations. He brought no soft soap with him on his flight from Paris.

HANDLING DIETRICH A FINE ART

Most of Miss Dietrich's directors have spoiled her with praise. "That was wonderful—wonderful!" they'd say after a scene. "But, darling, it was TOO good—a little too fine shading for movie audiences. Now let's try it again with more emphasis."

During filming of "Destry Rides Again," George Marshall got results by handling her with unnecessary toughness. "Come on!" he'd bark. "Don't give me any of that old Dietrich art. You're just a leading lady in a western now." This treatment was so novel that the actress was amused.

The French director offers little praise or criticism. He says what he has to say in front of the entire company, without leading the star aside for quiet instruction. He seldom shows irritation. "That was not for us a lucky scene," he may observe after a bad take. "Again, please." Often he gets what he wants on the first or second try. He mentally assembles the completed picture as he goes along, and there is scarcely a foot of waste in the cutting room.

World Affairs Reviewed

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Washington, D. C. — Plans of Spain, which were delayed during the recent civil strife, to develop the Balearic Islands into one of the finest resorts in the world are now underway. For many years these islands have been a mecca for tourists and a haven for writers and artists. The three islands, Mallorca, Ibiza, and Menorca, comprise an area of 1935 square miles and contain a population of more than 350,000.

Mallorca, the big sister, is a radiantly beautiful daughter of Spain. Menorca, slight and delicate, sits at her side, a country maiden beyond all doubt, yet with a grace that suggests a certain knowledge of the world. Menorca's features and people suggest the North—a strange mixture of English and a little Dutch and Spanish.

One of the most interesting avenues of the world is to be found in Mallorca. In some phenomenal inundation centuries ago a torrent burst down from the hills and dug a channel which now forms the great highway of the island. Out of its high banks Moorish streets climb like staircases to high levels. Europe and Asia long disputed over the possession of Mallorca, but it was Europe that conquered and it is Europe that has given the place its dominating character.

On Mallorca's other hand, Ibiza, a charming peasant in bright apron, skirt and shawl, hung with barbaric jewelry, piques the interest of genealogists, for in her a different strain, Arabic, seems to predominate.

Coming to Menorca, one sails past the ruins of San Felipe Castle, the scene of many hard-fought battles in Menorca's stormy history, past the Island of Rats, and ahead, on the highest and greenest crest, may be seen San Antonio, the seat of the noble Vigo family.

And then suddenly, as the vessel rounds a point, Mahon bursts into view, a quick splash of pink and white on the hillside, tier after tier of quaint streets. Mahon sparkles, as does the whole island. It is a mass of spotless up-and-down-hill streets of shining dolls' houses.

From the steamer's deck the town appears to be pure Spanish. Terrace upon terrace of white houses ascend, with the spires of the inevitable churches dominating the mass. But that is only Mahon's little joke on the visitors, for many of the homes show English features, reminders of Lord Nelson's conquest of the islands in 1798. Indeed, Mahon bears the impress of its seventy years under British occupation. It presents the amazing phenomenon of a fragment of Cornwall midway between Africa and Spain. Hanover, George, and other English-named streets are among the most popular. An indefinable something, suggestive of the English provincial town, too, is reflected in the green doors with their shining brass fixtures and square-paned windows with white woodwork. Contrary to the rule in Spain these, for the most part, remain unshuttered during the daytime.

This mixture of the English and Spanish gives Mahon a character of its own, which is shared by its people. It is the women who refuse to conform. In continental Spain and in the other islands they take their places in the fields with the men and the beasts of burden. Not so with Menorca. It believes that woman's place is in the home, or possibly, as a concession to the march of the times, in the factory, but not in the field.

—A WEALTH OF RELICS—

The Balearics are rich in relics, from the days of the prehistoric inhabitants of the Mediterranean countries on down to modern times. Castles, churches, palaces, forts and watchtowers are seen so frequently that they become almost matters of course.

One of the outstanding features of the Balearic group is the abundance and excellence of its harbors. Mahon, the principal city of Menorca, is an example. Here ships went their way down a long water lane, through pink and gray shores capped with rolling green, into what the Spanish Government plans to make one of the finest harbors in the Mediterranean.

Palma, Mallorca, the principal city of the Balearics, is snugly situated at the central point of a magnificent horseshoe bay. Like all the other waters of these remarkable islands, the Bay of Palma could supply half the colors of an artist's palette.

Palma is a grown-up country village of 81,000 people and considerable commercial importance. Some years ago it awakened to the realization that it had natural endowments in the form of great scenic beauty, perfect climate, and historic interest that assured it a place in the sun. Handsome hotels have sprung up, public service is furnished, roads are being improved, and automobile registrants are well up in the thousands. There are cinemas, theaters, and concerts, and Palma is even talking of a casino like that the Monte Carlo. With this acceleration toward modernness, Spain is making its first stroke to make the Balearics the world's playground.

HELP A FELLOW!

Dear Mr. Sun:
I have really begun
To think
You're quite on the blink!
Is there some disgrace,
For why you do not show your face?
Of course I know you're there,
Though days, for weeks, you've been unfair;
But bein' there is not enough,
You're made for finer stuff—
Brush away that dampish pile
From your broad St. Nicholas smile!
Some folks I know wear shrouded faces,
Like they'd been to shady places;
This heart of mine would be much lighter
If you and they would come out brighter!

Babson Reminds Labor Of Events In Europe

BY ROGER W. BABSON

Babson Park, Fla.—I have always been sympathetic with labor. During World War 1, I served as Assistant Secretary of Labor in Washington. I am sure that labor leaders will tell you that I was fair in solving the problems that came to the Department; and, believe me, there were enough of them! I soon learned that arguments did not do much good, and that lawyers only messed things up. Labor troubles are emotional, not statistical, and they cannot be "fought" successfully. Both sides are usually honest and serious from their point of view.

Have a Heart

The quickest way to solve a real bad labor row is to take the employer around to the homes of the workers and see the conditions under which they live. Then have some of the strikers shadow the boss for a few days and see how he is working for them twelve to sixteen hours a day against the keenest competition. Of course, there are some labor leaders who selfishly think only of themselves. They purposely stir up trouble to get the Union to give them a raise in pay. Some are connected with wicket rackets. These should be put in jail. Most labor leaders, however, are earnest and trustworthy men working to better the conditions of the workers as they see the light.

The chief cause of labor troubles is not the labor leader, or the wages paid, or the working conditions; but rather the expensive manner in which certain employers live, the way their children foolishly spend money, and the mistakes they make in exhibiting their power and wealth. Very few wage workers are jealous of the employer who founded the business; but it does "burn them up" to see the employers' children racing around town and blowing in money, while their own children have barely enough to eat or are unable to continue schooling. So much for where I stand on the labor problem. Furthermore, let me say that in normal times labor unions are both right and necessary.

Circumstances Alter Cases

When it comes to questions of strikes or lockouts, in days like these, I feel that both are selfish, cowardly, and unpatriotic. The stirring up of 750,000 rail workers of Class 1 roads with demands by labor organizations, not the employees, for vacations with pay is a good current example. This will use much of the energy of the President, who is already overworked, and of railroad officials. The time of all concerned might far better be spent in co-operating to move more quickly important industrial freight shipments.

The government is putting a ceiling on the profits of all businessmen, and it is only fair to likewise veto strikes and lockouts. Although in the past labor has not had a fair deal at times; yet "two blacks do not make a white". When the whole nation is in danger, as at present, we all ought to be ashamed to do anything which holds up production. Certainly, during the present emergency, Congress should demand compulsory arbitration. We either must go to work or go to war! I had much rather go to work,—forgetting wages, hours, or profits.

In view of the recent Supreme Court decision which was 100% in favor of labor, I wish to remind labor of what is happening abroad. When I was over there two years ago, I found that Germany had "canned" all the labor unions and threatened to shoot anyone who called a strike or a lockout. France refused to do this as the French politicians were afraid of losing votes. Even last April, when the Germans were pounding at the gates of France, labor leaders and employers were fighting one another. As a result, the Germans marched into France! The Germans then disbanded the French labor unions and their leaders were put in jail.

Labor Leaders Are In Jail

Up to February first of this year, the English government was very patient with the labor unions; in fact, my friend, Minister of Labor Bevins, is a radical labor leader. When he got on the inside, however, and saw the great dangers, he made both strikes and lockouts illegal. Since February first he has been putting uniforms on the workers, the same as on the soldiers. Anybody who sabotages or even refuses to work in an airplane factory, tank plant, or munitions factory is thrown into jail.

Worse things have happened to the labor unions in Norway, Belgium, Holland, and other countries that tried to remain neutral as we are trying to do. These countries had not only very strong labor unions, but also unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, sickness benefits, and co-operative buying societies. These were doing splendid work with their co-operative factories, stores, and even banks. All of these good things have been thrown out of the window. The United States and Canada are now the only countries that have these blessings today. It certainly seems as if we all should be on our good behavior and quit quizzling, or even arguing among ourselves.

Remember The Farmers!

Farmers are not perfect. They have always howled and always will howl. On the other hand, they sure are getting the short end of the stick when it comes to prices, wages, and hours. Once I figured that if farmers were paid the same as the building trades are paid, beef would sell for three dollars a pound, eggs would cost two dollars a dozen, and bread would sell for twenty-five cents a loaf. Of course, this unequal treatment is very unfair to the farmers. You would think that the city people, especially union labor, would be ashamed to look a farmer in the face.

In this connection, let me say that the British are not only forbidding strikes and lockouts; but are doing other big things. For instance, they are endeavoring to put an end to instalment buying. The government makes the point that it is the total debt of the nation which really counts. Hence, as their national debt increases, they insist that personal debts be reduced.

I am no war monger; but I doubt that we can save Great Britain and our own necks by continuing, during this emergency, either the Old Deal or the New Deal. We have not to forget both, and this includes profits, wages, hours, and all the "fixings" that go with these things. Moreover, the sooner we forget ourselves, the sooner we will save our necks. Let us make no mistake about this.

Advertising is News too—

WHEN people are given helpful information about merchandise which they want and where it can be obtained, the result is good news for the readers and profitable advertising for the merchants. This newspaper offers the most effective method for business men to tell the news about their merchandise and service to the families in this community.

The extent of this effectiveness depends, of course, upon our circulation. Not necessarily how large, but where, how obtained and other facts that the advertiser has a right to know when he spends money for advertising. To give our advertisers this information we belong to the Audit Bureau of Circulations, a national, cooperative association of 2000 publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies. The Bureau was organized in 1914 and its purpose is to furnish advertisers with verified information about the circulation of the publisher members.

The Bureau has a staff of skilled auditors who make an annual audit of the circulation records of each publisher member. This audited information is then issued in A. B. C. reports which show how many copies of a newspaper are printed, where they go, how the circulation is secured and many other facts advertisers should know.

This newspaper therefore not only offers advertisers a good way to get their news to the right people in the community but also provides protection for advertising investments by giving audited circulation figures.

Isle Royale Park Now Included In Weather Summary

The state climatological summary for Michigan, published by the United States Weather Bureau, now contains a report from the cooperative weather station maintained at Mott Island, Isle Royale National Park. The publication of this weather data marks the first official weather recorded and published from Isle Royale.

No reliable weather records are available for Isle Royale except a few fragmentary records kept by occasional fishermen or trappers who spent the winter on Isle Royale. Beginning in October, 1935, the National Park Service kept records of temperature, snow fall, and ice conditions during the winter months. Beginning in 1937, two fire weather stations were established in the park to aid in determining fire hazard conditions. Since the establishing of administrative headquarters at Mott Island in 1938, continuous records were kept throughout the year. Beginning this year, through the cooperation of the United States Weather Bureau, the data thus collected will be available to the public.

The data kept, although less than two years old, indicates a striking difference between weather conditions in the Park and those obtaining on the mainland. The influence of Lake Superior helps in the summer to maintain a low average mean temperature and in the winter the general temperature level is kept up by the water temperature of the lake. During 1940 the highest temperature recorded for the Park was 81 degrees. Since January 1, 1941, the lowest temperature recorded was 8 degrees below on January 25.

The snow fall on Isle Royale is considerably less than on the mainland in the vicinity of Houghton. The data obtained from the weather station at Isle Royale will assist in determining the length of the growing season, frost-free period, and other new and interesting information not before available to the public.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

HITLER'S LOST WAR

III

Col. Lindbergh's conviction that Hitler is going to win the war is apparently shared by a number of people, whose views indicate that wishful thinking is not all on one side in this struggle.

Dorothy Thompson

But there is one person who does not share their confidence. His name is Adolf Hitler.

Are not the negotiations between Hitler and Vichy interesting? Why is Hitler negotiating? He did not negotiate with Dr. Schuschnigg, the Chancellor of Austria, nor with Dr. Benes, the President of Czecho-Slovakia, nor with the President of Poland, when all three of these countries had armies and institutions intact. He attacked, destroyed and has not negotiated since.

Seven months have passed since Hitler defeated France in the worst military disaster in modern history. Two-thirds of the country is occupied, and it all could be. Two million French prisoners are in Hitler's hands. The country is weaponless at home. Why then does Hitler attempt to make another Munich in Vichy after defeat? If he wants the Mediterranean ports why does he not take them? Could any one stop him?

Is there not something comic in the spectacle of Hitler tossing Laval to Petain, and Petain tossing him back to Hitler, and Hitler tossing him back to Petain as though Laval were the flamingo who served as a live croquet ball in "Alice in Wonderland"?

Why does Hitler carry on like this?

• • •

In his last speech Hitler said that in the last year he had made 724 mistakes and the British 1,824,000. The number of mistakes on either side, however, is not what is important. The political and strategical nature of the mistakes is what is important. Britain underestimated the military strength of France. But Hitler completely misestimated Britain, but completely! And he also overestimated the military strength of France. And these two mistakes have cost Hitler his war.

• • •

In April last year I had a talk with an important neutral European statesman. The talk was confidential, and only the fact that the gentleman has since died releases me from the confidence. He told me that he had had a talk with Hitler only a few days before the attack on Poland. Hitler had assured him that the British were bluffing. He confided in him that the Nazi intelligence service had interrupted the reports of Sir William Edmund Ironside to both the Polish and British governments and staffs, from which he had learned that in Ironside's opinion the Poles could only hold out for a matter of weeks. Arguing from this, Hitler concluded, first, that the Poles would not offer effective resistance, and, second, that the British, once Poland fell, would withdraw from the war.

In the course of the conversation, Hitler said, "I do not want war with Britain. To avoid it is the very basis of my policy. Even if I won, it would be a world catastrophe. Germany is in no position to take over the role of Britain and neither is the United States. It would mean world chaos, in which Germany would suffer as well as everybody else. My representatives all assure me that Britain will not really fight."

• • •

When Col. Lindbergh, in the recent cross-examination before the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee said, "After all, it was France and Britain who declared war," he made a most misleading statement. France and Britain were urging Hitler to settle his affairs by negotiation with Poland—with whom he had a non-aggression pact that he himself had signed. They said privately to Hitler and publicly to the world that a suspension of negotiations and armed aggression would automatically produce war with both of them.

Having once tried to save peace by giving in to Hitler, over Czecho-Slovakia, they now tried to save it by resisting him and making the consequences perfectly clear.

Hitler did not believe them and opened war by a lightning attack from all frontiers on Poland. For two days afterward the Chamberlain government hesitated, and there were scenes in the House of Commons and Englishmen cried, "Speak for England! We have given our word of honor!"

Chamberlain did not declare war. He took account of the fact that a state of war had been created by Hitler's aggression.

Why does Col. Lindbergh attempt to mislead America by inferring that France and Britain were guilty?

Why did Hitler not turn from the short successful war on Poland, directly against France and Britain? Why did he wait from fall until spring?

He still wanted to separate France from Britain!

Why, having knocked France down in the space of a few weeks, did he hastily conclude an armistice without demanding the surrender of the fleet or the capitulation of the Colonial Army?

Because he thought Britain would withdraw.

Why did he not push right through and attack England at that moment, when the British Isles were completely undefended, and the army, escaped from Dunkirk, still disorganized for home defense?

Because he does not want Britain as an enemy. He wants Britain as an ally. That has been the basis of his whole miscalculated policy!

Ludendorff would not have waged such a war. And Hitler, were he perfectly sure of himself would not have waged such a war. For Hitler has said, "The slightest sign of vacillation is suicidal."

• • •

Fantastic as it may seem, the sudden collapse of France further set Hitler's plans awry. History may yet record that the disastrous defeat of France, plus the miraculous steadiness of Britain was the moment of Hitler's Armageddon. For Hitler had counted on luring the whole British Army into France and pounding it slowly to pieces on French soil. Then he would not have had to invade England, but England, deprived of her army and all her trained forces, would have had to capitulate. But neither the armies of Britain nor of France were pounded to pieces. For the French army simply collapsed—and the British escaped.

Hitler's haste to conclude an armistice was still made in the hope of getting England out of the war. Then he could make a "deal" with her. He misestimated England, therefore, before the attack on Poland, after the victory over Poland, and after the collapse of France!

• • •

Meanwhile, his hastily concluded armistice with France plagues him. His hope for a Nazi revolution in France is a dud. The rock upon which he must found his Nazi church in France is Peter, to be sure, but Peter (Pierre) Laval, a discredited old gambler of a politician, full of cynicism and personal ambition, and without a shred of a mass following. He has no weapon with which he can bludgeon France into relinquishing her navy. For France has Hitler already, so has nothing worse to fear; if he promises to release the prisoners—which he is really afraid to do—the French have no faith that his promises will be kept. Why should they? If he gets the Mediterranean ports, he has no ships with which to use them. And he negotiates because he needs France!

For meanwhile Britain, defending her own shores and at the same time fighting a brilliant campaign hundreds of miles from home, has, with the aid of Greece, knocked out Italy in Africa. There are no Germans or Italians in Africa for Weygand to surrender to, even if his government so ordered!

Two armies and two navies escaped from Hitler as the result of his sudden victory over France and as the result of the third repetition of his mistake about Britain.

Does Colonel Lindbergh think that this behavior is either political or military genius? It is crass stupidity. It is a moral moron misestimating the strength of resolution and a word of honor.

• • •

But Hitler has another card to play. He is playing it. And his offensive during the last few weeks has been a political offensive—concentrated in Washington! There his friends, whatever kind words they may be saying about Britain, are playing his game as vigorously as they can. Stop aid to Britain! Force Britain to give in by reversing the American foreign policy! Save Germany the awful task of having to defeat a Britain supplied by the United States!

This is Hitler's fourth attempt since the war began to defeat Churchill without having really to fight him. For Hitler knows that even if he should win, it would be a world catastrophe. He would have a situation on his hands with which he knows he is unable to cope.

• • •

If Col. Lindbergh loves peace so much, why is he not advising a defeated Italy to make peace with a victorious Britain? Why is he advising a completely undefeated Britain to make peace with Hitler instead?

Since the colonel has again elected to court the publicity that he pretends to loathe by playing high politics, it is the right of the American people to ask him a few straightforward questions.

SOO BACK IN LEAGUE

Sault Ste. Marie—Sault Indians, fined $300 and limited to a squad of 11 players, are back in the fold of the Northern Michigan Amateur Hockey league today after a three-way settlement with the hockey club, the Pullar stadium board of directors and the N-M officials.

Thus ended the dispute which was brought to a head as the Indians, 1940 league champions, forfeited their game with Painesdale at Calumet Friday and dropped from the league.

GOING TO FLORIDA

Sault Ste. Marie—Mr. and Mrs. John R. Kniskern left on Saturday for Florida where they will vacation for the next six weeks. At Jacksonville they were joined by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kniskern.

One flank steak, ¼ cup butter, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 2 cups soft grated bread crumbs, 1-8 teaspoon thyme, 1-8 teaspoon marjoram, salt and pepper, 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Pound flank steak well and score lightly against grain of meat fibers. Melt butter in a saucepan saute onion and parsley, and add grated bread crumbs. Toss lightly and season with thyme, marjoram, salt and pepper. Place the stuffing on top of flank steak, roll up lengthwise and tie securely with string. Place on rack in roasting pan and brush with butter. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 10 minutes. Then reduce heat to moderate (325 degrees F.) and continue baking of 1½ to 2 hours, basting occasionally with the few tablespoons of water and fat in bottom of pan. Remove string and cut in 1-inch slices. Pour some of the pan gravy over each portion.

New Lights Are Erected While No One's Looking

Nobody much has noticed it except the policemen who patrol the city streets, but Ludington-street-style street lights are now installed for six blocks south on Tenth street and along three blocks of Sheridan road, Hugo Lillquist, superintendent of the city electric department reported yesterday.

Three lights were placed yesterday in the 1000 block Sheridan road replacing old fixtures which were moved to other places about the city where lights had been broken or otherwise discommissioned.

On hand at the electric plant are enough brackets to furnish the last six blocks of Sheridan road as old fixtures go out of order—providing the aluminum parts for the globes can be obtained. They are out of stock now and, although they are ordered, they are likely to be delayed in arriving because of a shortage of aluminum brought on by defense preparations.

Most of the Tenth street lights went in shortly after Christmas, following the annual epidemic of broken street lights, Mr. Lillquist said. "Kids with new bee-bee guns for Christmas, snow ball throwing during vacation; it happens every year at the same time," he said

So when a light was broken say on Seventh stret, for instance, an old fixture was removed from Tenth street to replace the Seventh street light and a new-type fixture was put up on Tenth.

That worked very well as long as the Tenth street lights were on corner cedar poles. But south of Sixth avenue, Tenth street is lighted by lights on ornamental iron standards. Some other plan will have to be figured for that, the superintendent said.

The Sheridan lights will be finished as soon as possible.

MORE POWER FOR BIRD'S EYE

Three large transformers which will add 200 horsepower of electricity at the Bird's Eye Veneer plant in Escanaba were ordered yesterday by the city electric department. They will increase the Bird's Eye supply to nearly 400 horsepower. Delivery is expected in about three weeks. The added power is required because of the plant's extra business in defense orders, it was reported.

Fewer Rejections Noted In Latest Draft Examinations

The rate of rejections in induction examinations yesterday was about six percent better than it was in January, when 19.7 percent of those examined failed. The rate was 13.5 percent yesterday. Today's examinations may change the figures. The army is trying to decrease the number of rejections by close co-operation with local examining physicians.

Rejections yesterday were as follows: Delta county, two; Menominee, one; Marquette, four; Alger, one. Three were for dental insufficiency, one for cardiac deficiency, one for asthma, one for hernia, one for general unfitness and another for mental deficiency.

Lansing Society Busy With Clubs, Other Activities

BY DAGNY JAY

Not content with the parties, committee and club meetings which crowd their hours, a num- of capital politicos and their wives are spending an evening a week learning the rhumba. The Bill Palmers—he is a member of the important new Civil Service commission which has the flock of state office workers in a dither—and the Bill Doyles—he maintains the Michigan Chain Store office in Lansing and is a member of the Lobbyists club, are in the group which meets Friday nights to practice new steps. They tried them out for the first time in public at the gala Pink ball last Saturday night. Their next opportunity will come at the Refugee ball, week from next Tuesday.

An array of scorched Valentines behind ice-covered windows was the only sorry note in the great big fire in the old Woolworth store in the capital city Monday. Even a kitten which lived in the basement came through the conflagration unscathed, so the fire, Lansing's biggest since the Hotel Kerns disaster in 1933, was hardly a tragedy. It broke out early in the morning, and when clerks reported for work at 9 a. m. they found they had a holiday. Regardless of age, there's nothing quite as exciting to the average person as a fire, and the workers in the sales tax offices, across the street from the burning building, enjoyed grandstand seats.

Another fire here a week or so ago, had less of the spectacular, but more pathos concerned with it. A rooming house where lived about a dozen girls who worked in offices in the State building, caught fire in the night, driving the residents into the streets in their nighties. One girl, employee of the state highway department, lost all her clothes, even a new fur coat for which she had just finished paying. But a few days later her friends gave a shower for her, chipping in for a "stake" so she could buy new clothes. There is real friendship among the state workers, most of whom are far from their homes and families.

Two Important Parties

Two big parties for women are scheduled for next Thursday in Lansing, giving cause for debate to many women here who would like to go to both. The House and Senate club is having its first party, a luncheon at the Hotel Porter for both active and associate members, and Walnut Hills Golf club women's board is staging its annual luncheon and bridge party for past presidents and retiring board members, at the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. F. E. Geraldeau, formerly of Gladstone, is vice president of the new board. She and Mr. Geraldeau are active in golf, bridge, and bowling at the club.

Mrs. Harry Hittle, House and Senate club president, and Mrs. James Stanley of Kalamazoo, secretary, spent all day Wednesday bringing the roll of associate members of the club up to date, preparatory to sending out invitations to the luncheon next week. Mrs. Stanley was elected to serve as treasurer of the club, but on the resignation of Mrs. Stanley Nowak of Detroit, secretary, Mrs. Stanley assumed the role of scribe. Mrs. Fred Kircher took over as treasurer.

Club members were entertained by the associate group of the Michigan State club for the second time this year when they were guests at a luncheon and bridge party at Hunt's Food shop, East Lansing, last Thursday. In January, the House and Senate group was entertained at the State club women's reception for wives of the administrative officers.

Refugee Ball

Plans for Lansing's Refugee ball are rolling toward completion with the assistance of almost the entire social register. The British consul at Detroit, Cyril Cane, and Mrs. Cane, and the French consul at Detroit, Maxime Rainquet, and Mrs. Rainquet, have accepted invitations to attend the party February 25 in the new Michigan State college auditorium. A long list of sellers of "patron" tickets has been announced. "Patron" tickets sell at five dollars and up. Regular tickets are three dollars a couple, two dollars, single, and there are one dollar tickets for spectator seats in the gallery. But, because the wish to help Britain is so strong here, the high admission prices have received no adverse criticism though they are equalled only by two other parties in the capitol, the Pink ball and the Charity ball.

PIQUANT SAUCE

One tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1 tablespoon flour, 3-4 cup meat stock or water, 3-4 cup rich milk or cream, 1 egg yolk, 2 tablespoons sherry or 2 teaspoons lemon juice, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of cayenne pepper.

Saute onion and parsley in butter. Blend with flour. Add liquid and cook until thickened. Beat in the yolk of egg and add either sherry or lemon juice. Season with salt and pepper and pour over the broiled cod steaks.

For cold weather luncheons, fish chowder makes a perfectly balanced one-dish meal. Economical protein plus vegetables and milk for the growing child and the hungry adult at very low cost.

WE, the WOMEN

BY RUTH MILLETT

GRANDMOTHERS have lost their place in the world. The formulated, scientifically - raised babies that are growing up today don't know what it is to be spoiled by a doting Grandma. Mama sees to that.

It doesn't matter that Grandma lives in the same house. Because it doesn't do her any good. Mama knows best—and Grandma doesn't know anything about children, according to Mama.

If Grandma picks the baby up when he cries, Mama gets "that look" on her face—the superior look of the woman who has read two child psychology books, and consequently thinks Grandma who learned about children from having seven is a complete idiot about babies.

If Grandma tries to feed the baby, or do any other little thing for it, she does it wrong, according to Mama.

Any attention she gives the baby is sure to "spoil" it—no matter how much attention it gets from Mama.

GROWING UP WITHOUT GRANDMA

Grandma is made to understand, in no uncertain terms, that she will be tolerated only on a "hands off" agreement. It's kind of pitiful to hear today's Grandma timidly ask Johnny's mother if it is all right for him to have a glass of milk.

It reminds you that a whole generation of children are growing up without knowing the wonderful feeling of being admired and indulged by a warm, loving, understanding Grandma.

City Youths Mature Earlier Than Their Cousins In Country

Tenth of a series of articles on scientists who study minds and the improvement of mental action.

• • •

BY DONALD A. LAIRD, PH. D., SCI. D.

This morning Dr. Paul Hanly Furfey did a half day's work before you or I were out of bed.

Laird

By getting up at 2:30 in the morning, he can work for some four hours without a single interruption or distraction — important for those doing creative, original work. His office is at the Catholic University of America, in Washington.

Although city bred himself—he spent his boyhood in Cambridge, Mass.—Dr. Furfey has made basic research studies of both farm and city boys. He is an authority on those youths of high school age who often cause their parents considerable concern during that hectic time of change from boyhood into manhood.

The changing voice is but one of a large number of physical and mental changes which mark the commencement of manhood. There are nearly 200 in all, Dr. Furfey has found.

From his extensive research, he has made a key by which the "development age" of a boy can be measured to find how near he is to manhood, or how far out of boyhood. He has found that city boys become men at a younger age than do country boys, and that in some races, boys become men earlier than in others.

Boys go through three distinct developmental age periods from ages 6 to 16. Dr. Furfey calls the period from 6 to about 10 or 11 individualistic. During this period, boys do not play group games; they prefer to play make-believe, and enjoy playing with girls.

The ages of about 9 to 11 mark the so-called gang age. The boys begin to play team games, have little to do with girls, and are interested in organizing and belonging to some sort of club.

The third stage starts rather suddenly, and, in most instances, marks the real beginning of manhood. The youth drops his old companions abruptly and takes on new friends, sometimes to his parents' consternation.

He suddenly becomes assertive and rebels at being told what to do or how to do it. He may show a sudden interest in girls, although this is not a major characteristic.

The sudden assertiveness and independence often cause parents to worry because the son seems to care little for them or the home. The change is perfectly normal, however, and, as Dr. Furfey has found, it is just one of the signs that the boy has become a man.

Dr. Furfey has a boyish enthusiasm for amateur photography and art galleries. One of his hobbies has been the study of several rare languages, which he has mastered well.

Recently he studied Chinese, largely teaching it to himself. To make each minute count, he wrote out lists of the Chinese forms and kept these beside his telephone. While he was talking over the telephone, he would study these words. In somewhat similar fashion, he has mastered Russian and several ancient Semitic languages.

Dr. Furfey believes that the greatest need of the world today is a quickening of the moral life and a real brotherhood of man, with no class distinctions—not even between city boys and farm boys.

Macaroni With Pork Chops

Macaroni and mushrooms make pork chops go farther.

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Service Staff Writer

To make a little meat go much farther, combine it with some form of macaroni or noodles. Well seasoned sauce is an important part of this nutritious extension. Tomatoes, onions, green pepper, kitchen herbs and spices are important. A small can of mushrooms costs little and does wonders. Buy the canned stems and pieces for sauces, rather than caps. They are cheaper and just as flavorsome as the perfect caps which are more useful for garnishing.

For the following recipe, drain a can of mushroom stems and pieces, saute the mushrooms lightly in butter before using. Any mushroom, either fresh or canned, is improved in flavor when sauteed before cooking.

BROILED HAMBURGER STEAKS WITH SPAGHETTI

Three-quarter pound spaghetti, 1½ pounds hamburger, 1 sweet Spanish-type onion, 2 tablespoons butter, 4 medium tomatoes or 1 No. 1 can tomatoes, salt and pepper to taste.

Cook the spaghetti in boiling water, salted, until tender. Drain and place in pan beneath broiling rack. On the broiling rack place the hamburgers, shaped into equal patties. Broil the meat slowly. When it is nearly finished, place on the rack the onion, sliced; the tomatoes, cut in halves. Add a little salt and butter on top of each and broil while meat completes cooking. The juices from the meat and vegetables drip below and season the spaghetti. If fresh tomatoes are not available, pour the can of tomatoes over the spaghetti at the beginning of the broiling process and it will season the spaghetti and heat through while the meat and onions are broiling.

BROILED PORK CHOPS WITH MACARONI AND TOMATO SAUCE

(Serves 4 to 6)

Three-quarter pound elbow macaroni, 6 rib pork chops, 1 No. 2½ can tomatoes, salt and pepper to taste, ¼ cup chopped onion, ¼ cup chopped, canned mushroom stems and pieces, ¼ cup chopped green pepper.

Pan broil the chops until well browned. Add the can of tomatoes and the mushroom liquor. When it comes to a boil, cut fire low and add the uncooked macaroni, onion, mushroom pieces and green pepper. Season to taste, cover tightly and simmer until all ingredients are tender, about 21 minutes. Add boiling water or stock if needed. Serve at once.

PINEAPPLE HAM SANDWICHES

(Serves 5)

Two and one-half cups chopped cooked ham, 1-3 cup fine cracker crumbs, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 1 egg slightly beaten, 1 No. 2 can sliced pineapple (10 slices), 25 whole cloves, small cooked sweet potatoes, 3 tablespoons butter, 1-3 cup brown sugar, 1-2 cup pineapple juice, cranberry jelly.

Mix ham, crumbs, onion and egg together. Shape in five patties and put each on a pineapple slice in a greased utility dish. Cover with a second pineapple ring studded with cloves. Arrange cooked sweet potatoes around the pineapple ham sandwiches. Heat butter, sugar and pineapple juice and pour about half of it over the food. Bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees F.), for about 40 minutes, basting occasionally with the remaining hot pineapple juice. Just before serving place a cube of cranberry jelly in the center of each pineapple ring.

BEEF LIVER PUDDING WITH CREOLE SAUCE

(Serves 4 to 6)

One-half cup dry bread crumbs, 1 cup milk, 1 pound beef liver cooked in salted water and then ground, 4 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons minced parsley, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of cayenne, 2 eggs.

Add bread crumbs to milk and cook to a smooth paste. Add liver, butter, parsley, salt, cayenne, and the egg yolks. Mix together and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into slightly buttered baking dish. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 1 hour.

CREOLE SAUCE

Three tablespoons butter, 1 onion, minced; ½ green pepper, chopped; ½ cup diced celery, ½ cup chopped mushrooms, ½ cup water, 1 can tomato sauce, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce.

Melt Butter, saute onion, green pepper celery and mushrooms. Add water and tomato sauce, salt, pepper and Worcestershire sauce. Simmer for 10 minutes. Pour over the liver souffle when it is ready to be served.

Three Cheers for Red, White and Blue

The patriotic note is everything these days, which makes this ski outfit, of red, white and blue, pretty smart. The jacket of the blue wool gabardine suit has a warm front of curly white lamb. The cap and knitted woolen mittens are red. (From Peck and Peck, New York)

CARLSON WINS CASE

Crystal Falls—A jury in circuit court at 10:50 last night, after deliberating for almost five hours, returned a verdict of no cause of action in the $10,000 personal injury suit brought by Gordon Jacobson, of Iron River, against John E. Carlson, former county clerk.

The jury took the case shortly before 6 p. m. C. D. Dwyer, of Crystal Falls, represented Carlson, and Ray Derham, of Iron Mountain was counsel for Jacobson.

The action was the outgrowth of an accident in the city of Iron River on Jan. 22, 1940, when, it is claimed, Carlson's car hit Jacobson, who went into the street presumably to flag it down. The plaintiff alleged the former county clerk was negligent. The defense claimed contributory negligence by Jacobson.

Testimony was similar to that given in the criminal case involving Carlson, who, at the November term, was acquitted of a charge of leaving the scene of an accident. Carlson testified he saw a man on the street, and swerved sharply to the left to avoid hitting him.

FACTORY WILL EXPAND

Ironwood — With the appointment of Robert Bugni as sales and promotion manager of Olson and Bergquist Co., the firm plans a reorganization of its wood working factory with a view to increasing the variety of products manufactured and making an effort to obtain government contracts for defense materials. Bugni also will have charge of the credit department.

"Two things we are certain of in considering the future opportunities and possibilities of this plant," said Bugni, adding, "we are certain that we have a sound basis and the tools to work with and we are certain of the ideal location for the production of the products we have in mind.

"This concern is to be "broadened" to produce at full time efficiency and production for an industry which is a "natural" in our vicinity. There will be a continuous searching for new markets and buyers, developing new possibilities and processes of manufacturing and production in the plant itself."

DR. ANDERSON DIES

Iron Mountain—Dr. William J. Anderson, one of the organizers of the former Scandinavian hospital, now the General hospital, in the city and prominent in Michigan and Illinois medical circles, died Thursday afternoon in Hines hospital, Chicago, Ill., after an illness of more than a month, according to word received by friends in the city.

He was graduated from Rush Medical college in Chicago and came here in 1916 to take over the practice of the late Dr. Otto Alving when the latter moved to Virginia, Minn. Shortly thereafter Dr. Anderson and others organized the Scandinavian hospital, in which the former Cloverland clinic was conducted.

In 1921 the hospital was closed, for lack of support, and some time later Dr. Anderson returned to Chicago, where he had since resided. He was on the staff of Augustana hospital for several years; was a former president of the Dickinson County Medical society and a member of the Michigan State Medical Society and the American College of Surgeons.

Weather Forces Postponement Of Winter Carnival Until Tonight

Postponement of the opening evening's program of Gladstone's 9th annual winter sports carnival until this evening because of inclement weather was announced late yesterday afternoon by Walter VanDeWeghe, general chairman. The carnival originally was scheduled to open last evening.

However, it rained throughout the major portion of the day softening the roadway into the park and the parking site to an extent where it would have made both driving and parking difficult and with rain still falling late in the afternoon a decision was reached to postpone the carnival opening for one day.

The program which was originally scheduled to be held last night will be held tonight. The hockey game and broom ball arranged for Friday evening will be cancelled until a future date because of the condition of the rink.

On tonight's program will be the president's cross country trophy race, the colorful skirade, coronation of Queen Tillie VanSomple and King Hilding Granberg and exhibitions of illuminated skiing and slalom skiing.

Coronation ceremonies will begin at 9 o'clock at a throne on the main hill just north of the clubhouse which has been constructed mainly through the assistance of the Guide Service.

Mayor John V. Erickson will convey the symbol of royalty to Queen Tillie while MC Wallace Cameron will crown King Winter Hilding. The queen will be attended by members of her court.

Exhibitions of illuminated skiing and slaloming on a flare lighted course will follow and there will be a party at the clubhouse. Refreshments will be served.

Skiing programs for aSturday and Sunday will be run off as scheduled.

PUBLIC WARNED ABOUT SWINDLE

Post Office Dep't Gives Info On Get Rich Scheme

The so-called "Spanish Swindle" is again being used according to word received by Postmaster B. R. Micks from the post office department and Mr. Micks in turn warns the public to beware.

The scheme is operated by swindlers from various towns and cities in Spain who write to persons in the United States to induce them through the offer of a reward to come to Spain with a sum of money to be used in securing the release of certain papers which can be negotiated for a large fortune, usually between $300,000 and $400,000, that is being held in this country.

The scheme has also been operated from Mexico and South America.

If the recipient of the letter complies with instructions to cable the swindler, who represents he is in prison for bankruptcy, he receives specific instructions for making the trip to Spain, Mexico or South America, as the case may be, and if he goes as directed he is relieved of his funds, by trick or otherwise, after his arrival.

As operators of this scheme are located in foreign countries and as they require their victims to communicate with them only by cable, there is no caution which can be taken under the postal laws to prevent the swindle being carried out. Everything practical has been done, however, to have foreign authorities apprehend and punish operators of the scheme.

z—New low.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—The bond market suffered a general decline of fractions to 2 points or more today as financial quarters viewed with increasing anxiety moves in many parts of the world apparently aimed at quickening the war tempo.

Some of the heaviest losers among foreign dollar loans were those directly tied to the day's news developments. These included Australia 4½s, Italy 7s, Rome 6½s, Japan 6½s, Queensland 6s and Panama 5s.

Well in front of the retreating domestic issues were Southern Railway 6½s at 80½, Portland General Electric 4½s at 81½, Nickel Plate 5½s at 68½, International Mercantile Marine 6s at 8', Bush Terminal 4s at 68¾, International Telephone 5s at 38¼ and Delaware & Hudson refunding 4s at 49 1-8.

U. S. governments offered better resistance, but ended the day with losses of from 3-32 to 9-32 of a point.

The Associated Press average of 10 utilities touched a new 1940-41 low at 99.5, off .3 of a point.

Total sales of $6,637,700, par value, compared with $6,494,900 Tuesday.

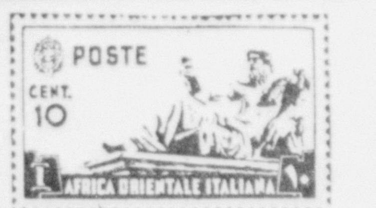
• STORIES IN STAMPS



Deserts Hide Scars Of 4000 Years of War

THE Italo-British conflict on two African fronts is important in Europe's crisis, but the god of the Nile, pictured on the Italian East Africa stamp above, sees these campaigns as minor engagements in a struggle that has continued for more than 40 centuries. Greater conquerors than Mussolini have won and lost empires in the deserts of Africa.

The kings who built the Pyramids sent armies to battle in the desert; Assyrians and Persians conquered Egypt. Alexander extended Greek power to include the north of Africa.

Rome destroyed Carthage in the 3rd century B. C. and Augustus took Egypt as a prize of conquest in 30 B. C. Decline of Rome's power made the Mohammedan conquest easy in 639 A. D. The Crusades included an African expedition.

Napoleon ran into trouble when he launched an African campaign. Construction of the Suez Canal during the 19th century introduced British influence, but final peace was not effected without prolonged struggle.

Italy gained a foothold in Africa late in the 19th century, gained revenge for defeat at Adowa in 1898 by conquering Ethiopia in 1936, combined Eritrea, Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland into a single colony—Italian East Africa. Italian possession of Libya dates from 1912, following the Italo-Turkish war.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Feb. 13 (AP)—Wheat prices suffered another setback today, falling about a cent to the lowest levels since last September, but the relapse was only temporary.

May wheat led the decline, dropping a full cent at one stage to 78 7-8, lowest any wheat future has been here in almost five months. July and September contracts showed 5-8 to 7-8 cent losses, falling below 74 to new lows for the season, but then took the lead on a rally just before the close. May wheat closed 3-8 to ½ lower than Tuesday at 79½ but deferred deliveries were ¼ off to ¼ up at 74 to 74 1-8 and 74 5-8 for July and September.

Corn closed unchanged to ¼ lower, May 60 7-8, July 60 3-4; oats 1-8 to ¼ down; rye 3-8 to ½ lower; soybeans 1-8 lower to ¼ higher and lard 2 to 3 lower.

Corn dipped about ½ cent with wheat but later rallied. Rye sagged with wheat.

Red Cross purchases of 5,589,000 pounds of lard from 10 packers for shipment to Finland strengthened lard temporarily but weakness of hogs offset this.

BY FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—Stock market prices wilted further today as apprehension over war upsets in the Balkans and the Far East sapped Wall Street's buying confidence.

Industrials bore the brunt of the selling as losses ran to 2 points for leaders and as much as 5 for a few others.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .6 of a point at 41 which duplicated the bottom of August 16, last. Transfers of 642,940 were the largest since January 30. They compared with 413,420 in the pre-holiday session.

Rails were relatively resistant despite a contra-seasonal decrease in last week's freight loadings. Steels had to contend with more labor rumblings.

Prominent stocks on the losing end were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, Yellow Truck, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, American Telephone, Anaconda, American Smelting, Texas Corp., Bath Iron Works, American Can, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, U. S. Gypsum and Johns-Manville. J. I. Case dropped 5 points at one time but finished off 4¼.

The market broadened on the decline, 809 individual stocks being traded compared with 710 Tuesday. Of the total, 609 were off, 60 up and 140 unchanged.

Bonds and commodities were irregularly lower. Wheat at Chicago was off ½ cent a bushel to up ¼ and corn unchanged to down ¼. Cotton lost 20 to 30 cents a bale.

In the curb set-backs were registered for Gulf Oil, Bell Aircraft, E. W. Bliss, Midvale, Aluminum of America and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Volume here was around 179,000 shares versus 141,000 Tuesday.

HENRY McLEMORE

United Press Staff Correspondent

Los Angeles, Feb. 13 (UP)—Baseball's funny man plays straight when he talks about the Bees.

Mention that up and coming young team from Boston and Casey Stengel hangs his jester's hat on the nearest peg and gets down to the serious business of convincing you his baseball club is going places in the National League this year.

"You can't laugh off the Bees anymore," Stengel told me yesterday. "That day is past. There isn't a club in either league that has made the substantial progress the Bees have in the past five or six years. When Mr. Quinn went to Boston what did the Bees have? I'll tell you something that's hard to believe. They had 20 players. That's all. Now what do we have? Just 118 ballplayers, and they're all ours. Belong to us outright. So do four farm teams—Hartford, Evansville, York, and Bradford."

Before I could ask Ol' Casey what he thought the Bees would do with this material this year, he told me.

Club To Be Good

"We're going to be a good ball club. Lissen, all we need is three more players," he said. "Give us a good hitting centerfielder, a good hitting catcher and another dependable pitcher and we'll give anybody trouble, and that goes for the Reds, Dodgers, Cubs and Cards. And we may find the three we want, right in training camp at San Antonio this month and next. We found a raft of Good ball players in spring training last year."

Casey had me backed into a drugstore now and kept on talking. "We're the youngest club in either league. We're on the way up. Our club averages 23 or 24 years in age. Three or four years ago the Bees had nothing to sell but their franchise. Now we have half a million dollars worth of material in five or six players. Name me a team in the league that wouldn't like to have Sisti or Rowell or Ross or Miller or the young pitchers, Javery and Lamanna. Shucks, those are young guys, fast guys, guys with stuff and hustle. You can't help but like kids like that. I'm crazy about them myself, and the Boston fans are going for 'em. Why do you know that last year, when we were way down in the standings, hundreds of Boston fans followed the team out of town just to watch it play. That's appeal."

Not Much Money

Listening to Stengel talk, you couldn't help but feel that the Bees are building the right way, without much money, they are developing their own young players, and, what is more important, refusing to sell them down the river to richer clubs when they showed class. Stengel admitted that tempting offers had been made for nearly all of the young Boston stars.

"But if we had sold them," he explains, "what would we have had to sell our fans? Nothing, and you can't expect a customer to support a team that admits it hasn't any hopes for the future by trading and selling the men who can eventually produce a first division team."

Stengel, who knows as much baseball as any manager in the business, sees nothing but the hottest sort of scramble in the National League. He figures Cincinnati is the team to beat, what with its confidence, its experienced pitching, and a squad that is undoubtedly one of the most conscientious and best behaved in the history of baseball. But he gives Brooklyn and St. Louis a good chance to knock off the Reds.

"That MacPhail of Brooklyn is a tremendous hustler. He builds all the time," Casey said. "You have to keep busy or he'll round up all the talent."

Casey thinks St. Louis has the power to be a factor from the start, and refuses to condemn the Pirates or the Cubs.

"Novikoff and Stringer will help the Cubs," he said. "And Frisch at Pittsburgh is sure to have a hustling team, and a team that can hit."

As for the Giants and the Phillies, he refused to be optimistic. And as for the Bees—well, let him find those three players in San Antonio and Boston won't have to look to the Red Sox for a first division club.

● SERIAL STORY

DRAFTED FOR LOVE

BY RUTH AYERS

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: April calls Ann, tells her Kent is home, asks her to catch the midnight train. Ann refuses, says the audition she has been waiting for is to be held. April doesn't tell her sister of Kent's blindness, fearing the news might upset her, ruin the audition. She ends the call abruptly, but already she is forming a plan.

* * *

TRUST IN TOMORROW

CHAPTER IV

April Burnett was a great believer in tomorrows.

Perhaps Mother and Dad would return ahead of time from the camping trip and figure a way out of this situation. Maybe Ann would change her mind and come home. That was it, of course. Ann would start thinking about Kent and would leave for Pattansville, audition or not. Anything could happen tomorrow, so really all she had to worry about was tonight.

And tonight, after the long train ride, the fresh memory of what he'd been through, Kent must be spared. That was where the inspiration came in.

For a minute, it struck her as strange that she should be bothering at all. Yet somehow the memory of Kent's unseeing eyes, the thought of how much this weekend leave meant to him, made her pick up the telephone resolutely.

"Hello, Kent—bet you could never guess what sweet young hero worshiper this is."

She was all April now as she held the telephone cupped close to her mouth. Her voice was like Ann's, but the flippant words were hers.

"Why, yes," Kent was saying, "it's April. How are you, April?"

"Never mind about how I am," she crooned. "How is the conquering warrior?"

"Oh, very well, thanks." His words were clipped.

"Why didn't you let us know about your leave ahead of time so we could have brought the band out and thrown a party? It's not every day a man of military affairs come into our midst."

"I'm hardly that." He made a forced attempt at laughter. April lowered her voice.

"Kent, in all seriousness, Ann wanted me to send word to you."

* * *

April held the hand-et a little closer. So far, so good. She mustn't say a thing she couldn't stand by later.

"Ann will be all right," she hastened on, "it's only that she's a little—well, your coming home so sudden and everything—"

Kent was quick to answer. "I know it. It's all my fault. Trying to pull the heroics and not writing her."

"You know how Ann is," April was whispering, as if Ann herself might be overhearing. "She's not very strong."

"She'll be fine tomorrow if she gets a good rest, don't you think?" The eagerness in his voice made April's fingers curl around the cord.

"Oh, yes. Oh, my, I should say so," she answered. "Everything will be fine tomorrow."

"I guess it won't hurt me any either to slack up tonight. Army routine's pretty tough, you know. You tell Ann it's perfectly all right and I understand. I'll call her the first thing tomorrow."

"Yes, I'll tell her. Any other kind words you want to pass along?"

"Why, yes," Kent spoke very quietly. "Say that she's got to be okay tomorrow. I'm going to kidnap her for the whole day."

"H'm, orders from the top sergeant. If you were here, I suppose I'd salute."

He laughed. "Good night, April, and thanks for calling."

"Wait a minute, Cap'n Carter. Whoa, there!" She knew she would spoil the whole results of her inspiration if she said another word. And yet she couldn't stop herself. The Glitterbug, indeed!

"Yes?" he said it impersonally.

"How about me volunteering in Ann's place tonight?"

"Thanks, April," he said, "but that wouldn't do. Good night and good luck."

She needed it. She felt very empty as she went upstairs to dress. Kent had said, "Thanks, but that wouldn't do." What he meant, of course, was that she wouldn't do.

* * *

Casa Blanca, everyone said, was a wonderful night club for a town like Pattonsville. A big shell of a place, it had a smooth floor and a good orchestra. Every now and then some of the big-name bands you heard on the radio came here to play a one-night engagement.

Tonight, April decided, Casa Blanca looked like Casa Blank to her. It seemed suddenly too big, too much decorated, a sort of imitation of the real thing. And every dance piece the orchestra played was just in imitation, too, of some other band that played it better.

April wore a new black net dress, with a skirt billowing in yards-and-yards and a bodice sunningly sprinkled with small silver sequins. Out of this froth of swirling black, her yellow head with the upbrushed curls rose like a sunburst.

"What's the trouble, April?" One of the trio of young men escorting her leaned forward. "There's a perfectly good rhumba going to waste and you haven't noticed a single imploring look in our eyes."

"Something got you down?" It was Hal Parks, the nicest of the three; in fact, the nicest man she knew.

For a while, April tried to forget the problem that faced her in the morning. She made herself feel confident that Ann would return. If Ann didn't, surely there'd be some way to sidestep Kent. You could always send notes.

So she danced with the three men in turn; lighted their cigarets since she didn't smoke; listened as they made love in their bantering way. But through the haze of smoke and the blur of music, Kent's face kept coming before her.

* * *

It was Hal who had a way of understanding her better than anyone she'd ever known, who extricated her early and drove her home.

"Feel like talking about what's bothering you?" he asked.

She stammered an answer. "Oh, maybe it's this war business, the men going to training camps. You'll be leaving, too, Hal?"

Hal was handsome, with smooth dark hair and a mustache that gave him a debonair, man-about-town look. He wore a tuxedo with born grace, knew how to do things the right way. And yes, Hal was going places.

"I'd like to be in uniform right now," he was saying. "But I'm in chemical research at the plant on a rush order for the government, so it looks as if I'd be kept there for a while. Is that what was worrying you, April?"

April shook her head, uncertainly.

Hal didn't try to kiss her, but taking her hands said, "Well, whatever it is, April, if the time ever comes when you want to tell me, I'll be around. I feel that way about you."

A month ago, a week ago, even last night, April's heart would have given a skip or two at this. Now she could only nod and say gratefully, "You're a grand guy, Hal."

He helped her out of the car. "Sure I am," he said with vast aplomb. "And remember this, honey, there are other ways of being drafted besides for the army."

The motion to divide the Horton funds on that basis was made by John W. Hannah, Munising mayor, and adopted by the board.

Transferred $2,000 from the general fund to the infirmary account of the social welfare board.

Voted to appropriate $600 per year for the maintaining of a county agricultural agent. A request will be made to the Michigan State college, East Lansing, for an agent. The college will present the names of several persons qualified for the position and a committee composed of the board chairman, Ben Gregg, Alger County Clerk Henry Jacobson, Julius Sivula, chairman of the Alger County Agricultural Association, and William E. Glendon Mowitt Now Employed By Railroad Retirement Board

Glendon J. Mowitt, former assistant city manager of Manistique, is the subject of an interesting biography featured in the January issue of "All a-Board," the monthly publication of the Railroad Retirement Board.

Mr. Mowitt served as assistant city manager here late in 1926 and the early part of 1927. He now is controller of the Railroad Retirement Board Recreational association.

The story follows:

"Glendon J. Mowitt, controller, came to the board in 1939 with a background of successful experience which has earned him the reputation of expert in the financial aspects of public administration. Although only 38 years of age, he has held a variety of positions which gave him a wide knowledge of municipal and state administration before he entered the federal service.

"Mr. Mowitt prepared for a career in public service by completing the graduate course in public administration at the University of Michigan, after obtaining his B. A. degree from that institution. He received the degree of Master of Arts in public administration in 1926.

"After graduation, he served as assistant city manager of the city of Manistique, Mich., and as manager of the village of Oak Park, a suburb of Detroit, before joining the staff of Griffenhagen and Associates in 1929. A broad experience in government finance was gained during the depression when, in his capacity as a member of the staff of Griffenhagen and Associates, he was called in by municipal and state governments to straighten out financial tangles resulting from the sharp curtailment of public revenues.

"Among the jobs undertaken by Mr. Mowitt while connected with Griffenhagen and Associates were an investigation of county and municipal expenditures in the state of New Jersey, installation of an accounting system and preparation of a budget for Jefferson county, Kentucky, special budget studies for the state of New York, preparation of a budget and installation of a compensation of classification plan for the state of Connecticut; and an audit and survey of all agencies in Kentucky.

"In 1935 he was appointed director of finance of the city of Saginaw, Mich., and in 1937 became chief budget examiner for the state of Michigan. In the latter position he worked under Harold D. Smith, now director of the budget, who at that time was state budget director in Michigan.

"Mr. Mowitt now makes his home in Kensington, Maryland, with his wife and two children, John and Peter."

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 2-13

St. Joe Plays Felch; Eskymos At Menominee

KANTMEN HOPE TO COME BACK

Seek Defense to Stop Anderson, Visitor's High Scorer

Hoping for but not expecting the return of three regulars and a reserve out on account of illness and ineligibility, Coach Carl Kant send his St. Joseph cagers into action at the Bonifas gym this evening against a formidable Felch quintet.

Felch is considered one of the strongest class D teams in the Upper Peninsula but will be forced to compete in class C tournament this year because of last year's action in requesting a higher tournament classification. State high school association rules make it mandatory for a team to compete two years in succession if it chooses to compete in a higher class.

The St. Joe cagers, playing without four varsity players Wednesday night, were defeated by Baraga of Marquette by a score of 34-22. In spite of the lack of experienced players, the Parochials showed up very well and the score did not indicate the closeness of the game.

If Coach Kant's boys are to beat Felch, they must bottle up Jim Anderson, high scoring hook shot artist who has led the Dickinson county crew in all its games this year. Anderson is rated as one of the most dangerous scorers on the range and few teams have been able to stop him from chalking up four or five field goals per game.

There is no mistaking about the nationality of the Felch cagers as a slight Scandinavian tint is shown in the lineup, which consists of Anderson, Carlson, Isaacson, H. and S. Johnson and Swogman.

Coach Kant said last night that he would be unable to name a starting lineup until game time but that the lineup would be chosen from the following boys: Joran, Kleiman, Hirn, Van Enkevort, Walker, Feldhausen, Golobach, Grslick and Dufour.

The main game, which starts at 8:15 o'clock, will be preceded by a preliminary between two grade teams.

Leon Schram of this city will handle the main game.

PORTER'S CAP TO SEE ACTION

Santa Anita Winner To Be Threat In 1941 Kentucky Derby

BY ROBERT MYERS

Los Angeles, Feb. 13 (AP)—Charles S. Howard emerged from a delightful state of doubt today and mapped the immediate future racing plans of Porter's Cap.

The colt, winner of the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby, will be a definite entry and a big threat in the Kentucky Derby May 13.

He will also, in all probability, race in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap March 1.

Howard, up to yesterday's brilliant performance in the Santa Anita Derby by his prized three-year-old, was wondering whether to point Porter's Cap for the three-year-old classic of the turf, the Churchill Downs event; send him postward with aged candidates in the big handicap here—or race him in both.

And if the son of Porter runs in the handicap here, as most observers now are confident he will, the Howard silks once again will dominate the rich event. Just as Howard's great Seabiscuit and Kayak II ran one-two in the 'cap last year, so might Mioland and Porter's Cap finish in the race March 1.

Trainer Tom Smith and Howard picked up Porter's Cap for a mere $1,300 at Saratoga.

Hawks Will Meet Gladstone Tonight

The Escanaba Hawks hockey team will mix sticks and pucks with the Upbay Indians at Gladstone tonight.

The Indians have come along well since playing the Hawks previously and a hard game is expected by the locals. To date the Hawks have won three, lost one and tied one game and are anxious to get back in the winning habit.

The same lineup which started the Kingsford game will start tonight.

M&M Team Coming

When Escanaba's Hawks clash with the combined forces of Menominee and Marinette in the hockey game scheduled for the indoor rink Saturday night they will be doing their part to promote Escanaba's annual winter carnival.

The game is scheduled for 9 o'clock to allow those hockey fans who work Saturday night, an opportunity of seeing the Hawks in action.

The "Stateliners" are expected to come up with added strength by the addition of several players including Manderfield, former well known puck star.

Tiger Ace In City Says Detroit Will Repeat

"Sure, the Tigers have a good chance of repeating their American league championship this year. Last year was no fluke and we've got some fine young material coming up."

The speaker was smiling, personable 22 year old Barney Mccosky, sensational Detroit Tiger centerfielder and one of the most promising young ball players in the majors today. McCosky stopped in Escanaba overnight Wednesday and left yesterday morning for Houghton to address a meeting of state highway officials.

"The world series was hard to lose, especially the extra $2,800," said McCosky, "but that is all forgotten. Sportswriters have pictured the Tigers as being a bunch of old timers ready to fall apart. Naturally, we have some veterans among the fellows but we've got some fine youngsters coming up this year. I roller skated the other night with "Cholly" Gehringer and he is in fine shape and ready for another good season. Of course, Charlie is getting slower but he's still smart enough to be able to outplay most of the youngsters in the game today."

Hank Is Question Mark

McCosky, who broke into professional ball with Charleston in the Middle Atlantic league in 1936 at the ripe young age of 18 years, will leave for the Tiger training camp the last day of this month. His 185 pounds are well distributed over a magnificent six foot plus frame but he expects to take off seven or eight pounds by the time the season opens.

"Much of our pennant prospects will depend a lot on whether or not we can get through the season before the army calls Hank Greenberg," McCosky said, as he sipped at a cup of coffee. "Hank is a great guy and a grand player. If he stays with us all year, the outfield probably will be composed of Hank, either Stainback or Campbell and myself. I hated to see Pete Fox and Earl Averill go, but that is baseball."

Hit .340 in 1940

"Biggest thrill in baseball? Well, I guess it was my first major league game in the Detroit park. Detroit, you know, is my home town and as I strolled down to the plate as the first Detroit batter, I felt perfectly at home as if I had always played there. What did I do that day? Think I got two hits out of three. Did the world series get me excited? No, after the first ball is thrown the game is just the same as any other. Of course, we were all fighting for that extra cut and disappointed when we lost. I could have used that money to furnish the new home I'm building for my folks in Dearborn hills."

McCosky, who hit .340 last year to tie Greenberg for Tiger batting honors in his second year in the majors, thinks he may be deferred in the draft because his parents and one sister are dependent upon him for a living. A brother just recently joined the U. S. Navy.

"What pitchers are hardest to hit? Up there in the majors they are all hard to hit," McCosky said, with a smile. "Bobby Feller is no doubt the fastest in baseball today but I haven't had any worse luck with him than with most others. I really haven't a "cousin" (baseball players' term for some one from whom they get a lot of hits) in the majors. This Floyd Giebell, who cinched the pennant for us, has the makings of a fine pitcher. He has good control and a swell change of pace and is cool in the clutches."

"I'm sorry but I've got to get on that bus. You know I'd get lost up in this part of the country. I'm anxious to get up to the Copper Country. I've taken a lot of film along and hope to get some good pictures."

Old Weissmuller Swim Mark Stands

Detroit, Feb. 13 (AP)—Johnny Weissmuller's 14-year-old swimming record of 51 seconds in the 100-yard free style withstood another challenge today when Otto Jaretz, national A. A. U. sprint champion from Chicago, was clocked three-tenths of a second off the standard in a special match race.

Jaretz was timed in 51.3 seconds by A. A. U. officials in his race against Bill Prew, Wayne University collegian, who finished in 52 seconds.

Adolf Kiefer, Jaretz's teammate from the Chicago Towers club, again smashed his listed record in the 100-yard backstroke when he was timed in 58.3 seconds, a half-second faster than his top performance at Columbus, O., in 1939. Kiefer's previous assaults on the record have not yet been recognized.

S. Ski Association. The meet is expected to draw entries from Chicago, South Bend, Toledo, Fort Wayne, Detroit, Saginaw and Grand Rapids.

INDIANS TRAVEL TO MANISTIQUE

Newberry Seeks to Halt Long Losing Streak This Evening

Newberry — After losing to Munising last week-end, for their seventh consecutive loss, the Indians will play at Manistique Friday night.

The Indians were to have played Pickford last Saturday here, but the Pickford quintet was unable to reach Newberry because of bad weather conditions.

Newberry played without the services of two stellar regulars, Perry and Zagelmier last Friday, but it is probable that the boys will see action next Friday night.

The Indians lost to Manistique here earlier in the season. The game Friday will be Newberry's last out-of-town encounter. Then the boys will remain home to play the four remaining games of their schedule.

The probable starting squad for Newberry Friday night will be, Stephenson, Perry, Ludlow, Ketvirtis, Zagelmier.

LOCALS SEEK ELEVENTH WIN

Coach Rouman Is Back With Team After Throat Illness

Assured of the presence of their coach, Jim Rouman, who has been bothered this week with a throat ailment, Escanaba high school cagers will be shooting for their second victory of the season over Menominee tonight on the Maroon floor in a game that looms as one of the most imprtant of the season.

Earlier in the year, the Eskymos played their best brand of ball to trounce the badly off color Maroons and the result left a sour taste in the mouths of the Menominee boys. Since that time, they have been patiently waiting for tonight to come around so they could get revenge. In Hansen, Refling and Raboin, they have three high-scoring boys who are dangerous at all times and who may combine to give Menominee the honor of being the first team to score more than 20 points against the Eskymos.

Thus far this season, the Eskymos, in 10 games, have scored 270 points to 155 for the opposition for an average "spread" of 12 points for each game. The locals have never been particularly fortunate on the Menominee floor and are expected to have trouble scoring.

Coach Rouman undoubtedly will start Pfotenhauer and Gauthier forwards, Shomin center and Peterson and McDonald guards. Francis Pryal probably will do the bulk of the relief work.

CHOICE MENU

Menominee, Feb. 13 — Two choice cage games are scheduled for the Twin Cities Friday night with the spotlight focused on John N. Davis gymnasium in Menominee where the Maroons will meet Escanaba's undefeated Eskymos, current talk of the upper peninsula and runner up last year for U. P. class B cage honors.

Across the river in Marinette the Marines will entertain an old rival, Niagara, while Our Lady of Lourdes of Marinette will travel to Stephenson to meet Coach Bob Decker's in-and-out Eagles.

Both the Maroons and Marines lost to Friday's foes in games away from home and both are bent on turning the tables this week. Escanaba handed the Maroons their worst defeat of the season, a 48 to 18 setback, while Niagara nosed out the Marines, 32 to 30 in a hectic game at Niagara.

Coach Bernard H. McCann has been sending his Maroons through stiff practice sessions this week to prepare for Escanaba, which has won nine straight games including two from Ishpeming and Sault Ste. Marie, considered with Menominee, the class of the peninsula in early season.

Hold Down Score

Only one team has scored 20 points on Escanaba, the Sault Blue Devils, but Escanaba was collecting 23 to nose them out. Ishpeming lost a one-point game to the Eskymos at Escanaba, but the return game was a rout as Escanaba held the Hematites to two field goals and a 7-point total.

In recent games Escanaba has been having the same foul trouble that has plagued Menominee this year. Capt. Keith McDonald and Stule Peterson, regular guards, were forced out of the Sault game last week. Eddie Gauthier and Don Pfotenhauer handled the forward positions, while Shomin is center. Other Eskymos stars are Robert (The Kid) Pryal, who ran wild against the Maroons and Bob Pfotenhauer.

Only Schaefer And Hoppe Left In Cue Contest At Chicago

BY TOM SILER

Chicago, Feb. 13, (AP)—Jay Bozeman, fast-shooting young Californian, fell by the wayside tonight, leaving only defending champion Willie Hoppe and Jake Schafer in the battle for the world's three cushion billiards championship.

Hoppe, making his next to last appearance in the round-robin title tournament, defeated Bozeman, 50 to 35 in 35 innings, giving the champion 15 victories in 16 starts.

Bozeman has lost four of 16 contests and has no mathematical chance to share the crown. Schaefer has won 13 of 15 matches.

Hoppe, who now has won 37 out of his last 38 matches in title tournaments, jumped into a six-point lead in the first two innings of the match. Thereafter he led by five points or more all the way. He had a 25 to 16 edge at intermission and ran this to 34-20 shortly after the brief rest.

Bozeman rallied with 12 points in four innings to reduce his deficit to seven points. That was his last stand, Hoppe again taking charge and running out his string.

Hoppe had appeared shaky in most of his recent appearances, requiring more than 50 innings to polish off his opponents, but he apparently had regained his touch against Bozeman.

The red-haired Californian averaged a point an ining but even this highly respectable mark left him trailing far behind the steady, 53-year-old New Yorker.

The inning score:

Hoppe—160 121 005 203 222 003 010 032 300 031 20032—Total 50; high run 6; innings 35.

Bozeman — 010 121 014 002 400 040 000 007x 105 000 210 0—Total 35; high run 7; innings 34.

x—Denotes foul, loses one.

TRENARY PLAYS AT RAPID RIVER

Reinstated Alger Crew Determined to Get Good Start

Rapid River, Mich., Feb. 13—Trenary high school, reinstated by the state high school athletic association after several weeks suspension, will swing into action here tonight at 8 o'clock, meeting Coach Hoyer's fast traveling Rapid River quintet.

The Algers are a bit incensed over their suspension and are planning to make it hot for any team getting in their way.

Coach Ken Hoyer's boys have shown much improvement of late, Rock and Powers being their most recent victims. They have continued to show improvement in practices and believe they are ready to trip up the Algers.

The main game will be preceded by a preliminary at 7 o'clock.

Wassberg of Manistique will handle the main game.

INQUIRY ASKED ON DOUBLE KO

Boxing Chief Will Look Into Unusual Detroit Fight Ruling

Detroit, Feb. 13 (AP)—State Boxing Commissioner John J. Hettche ordered an inquiry today into the extraordinary "double technical knockout" finish of last night's fight between Welterweights Sammy Secreet of Pittsburgh and Pat Carroll of Detroit.

Commissioner Hettche, setting a hearing for Tuesday, said he sought formal explanations from all officials involved in the action which stopped the bout in the seventh round with both men bleeding badly from eye cuts.

Secreet and Carroll, after a bruising battle, were both in bad shape when Dr. N. H. Schlafer, commission physician, climbed into the ring in an effort to stop the fight. Referee Clarence Rosen then delivered his "double technical knockout" ruling.

Hettche said the matter remained confused because Dr. Schlafer had no authority to enter the ring, unless called by the referee, and that it had not been determined whether the physician meant to protect only one of the fighters, or both.

At the time, Secreet was well ahead on points. It was to have gone eight rounds.

Bark River Rifle Club Holds Shoot

Four teams participated in the weekly shoot of the Bark River rifle club last night. Bert Erickson's Grocers topped the list with a 622 total; L. Bruce's Mail Carriers had 550; H. Palmgren's Mechanics 546; and Ben Douglas' Armos shot 536.

Erickson's individual score of 140 was high for the evening.

SPILLING the DOPE

BY JOHNNY INKSLINGER

THE MORE SUCCESSFUL people are, the more common they are . . . that's an axiom that all newswriters find to be true . . . it is much easier to get information and action from top notchers than it is from the fellows who are not quite up there . . . in other words, there are very few four flushers among the real champions . . . and our contention along those lines was strengthened again yesterday morning in meeting young Barney McCosky, sensational outfielder of the Detroit Tigers . . . McCosky stopped over night in Escanaba, enroute to Houghton, where he will be a speaker at the highway conference being held in the Copper Country . . . this is his first trip north of the straits and he said: "Boy, a guy could get lost up this way . . . I stick pretty close to the rest of the gang!"

> The most completely lost of all days is that in which there is no laughter.

MODEST, QUIET and unassuming, McCosky is cordial and gracious in his treatment of strangers . . . in spite of the fact that he was tied with the great Hank Greenberg in leading the American league champion Detroit Tigers in batting last year and is considered one of the greatest young players in the majors today, McCosky is not at all impressed with his importance . . . he makes one feel in a minute as if one had known him for years . . . he looks you in the eye squarely, answers questions without hedging and makes you feel as though he is glad to do it for you . . . when he leaves you, he makes you feel that he enjoyed the visit as much as you did even though he might have had many problems on his mind.

> Women pay more attention to their beauty than brains—no matter how stupid a man is, he is seldom blind.

MEETING McCOSKY yesterday confirms our faith in human nature and in our long held belief that no-one, no matter where or why, has a license to feel superior to his fellow man . . . the fellows at the top are the ones who are not above meeting John Jones and Jim Smith on common ground . . . in six years of sportswriting and meeting celebrities here and there, we have only found one, a midwest college coach, who felt he was too good for the common herd . . . and he is on the skids right now . . . remember the old story of Abou Ben Adam, who loved his fellow men? . . . that's a little bit far fetched here but the principle of friendship on a common ground is involved in both . . . if McCosky ever is forced to quit baseball, his real love, we are willing to bet he would make good in most anything else he tried.

BROWNS LIGHT ON RECRUITS

St. Louis Team Believes This Will Be Big Year for Club

St. Louis, Feb. 13 (AP)—An easy way to tell whether a major league club believes it is set for a good season is the number of rookies it takes to spring training camp.

The Browns offer a case in point, since the team is honestly convinced this is the year it'll stop being an irritation and start being a sensation in the American League.

In 1940, the club took 17 recruits to San Antonio for spring training. Some of them just cluttered up the field.

This year, the Browns have stripped for action and only eight rookies will make the Texas trip late this month.

The team's roster, issued today, listed a total of 33 players—seven under the limit—including 16 pitchers, two catchers, eight infielders and seven outfielders.

Shifting their emphasis from rookies to veterans, the Browns have added Johnny Allen from Cleveland, Benny Galehouse and Fritz Ostermueller from Boston, and George Caster from Philadelphia to their pitching staff.

Only three recruit hurlers will be on hand, all from the Browns' San Antonio farm. They are Maurice Newlin, who won 23 and lost 8 last year; Bob Muncrief, with a 22-9 record, and Loy Hanning, who had 10 victories and 13 defeats.

For infield help, the Browns are counting chiefly on Johnny Lucadello, switch-hitting second-baseman from Toledo, where he batted .334. In the outfield, they have Robert Estalella, the Cuban formerly with Washington. He batted .341 for Minneapolis last season.

EMERALDS AND INDIANS CLASH

Old Rivalry Will Be Renewed Tonight At Manistique

Manistique — The Manistique high school basketball team, displaying new uniforms, will renew an old rivalry this evening, meeting the Newberry high school quintet on the local floor. The reserve teams of the two schools will meet in the preliminary, scheduled for 7:15 o'clock.

Manistique defeated the Indians at Newberry earlier this season but the Luce county team reported at that time that they would avenge that defeat at Manisique. If the game tonight is anything like the Newberry-Manistique games played on the Manistique floor in the past two years, it will provide the fans with plenty of thrills.

The rivalry between the two schools has been acute for many years and the games have always been hard fought and exciting.

Coach Reque's lads suffered their first setback of 1941 at Sault Ste. Marie last Friday, and are anxious to get back into the victory column.

The Emerald lineup was revamped somewhat by Coach Reque this week because Gilroy and Peterson have been somewhat off form. Asp will start at center, with Rushford and Holm at forwards, and Norton and Hastings at the guard berths.

The Emeralds have three home games in successive weeks here, meeting Newberry, Escanaba, and Gladstone on the local floor, before winding up the pre-tournament season at Menominee.

Rico Zenti will officiate the feature game.

Gulf Stream Dash Won Fifth Season By Stormy Weather

Nassau, Bahamas, Feb. 13 (AP)—The veteran yacht Stormy Weather, queen of the Miami-to-Nassau racing fleet, extended her reign to five years today by winning the eighth annual 184-mile dash across the gulf stream.

Stormy weather sailed into the harbor at 1:23 a. m. this morning with 13 minutes to spare in corrected times. She was third across the finish line.

The fleet bucked choppy seas and rain squalls for two-thirds of the route. Stormy weather finished in 37 hours, 23 minutes, 36 seconds. Her corrected time was 35:12:08.

The fleet's smallest entrant, the 35-foot sloop Quartermore, owned by Gordon Mendelssohn of Detroit, earned fourth place with a corrected time of 35:46:33.

Queen June Ranguette Begins Carnival Reign

Capacity Crowd Watches "Ice Revues of 1941" At Indoor Rink

Festivities of the 1941 Winter Frolics of Escanaba began last night when a capacity crowd watched the colorful coronation of Queen June Ranguette, attractive brunette, who will reign over the three days program.

An honor guard, representing every sport available throughout the winter months, such as tobogganing, snowshoeing, skating, skiing, hockey, archery, hunting, iceboating, and lumbering, formed an aisle to the throne down which Queen June rode in her sleigh. Preceeding her were her court, Jeslyn Jackson, Helen Lou Peterson, Edith Ammel, Dorothy Hurley, Helen Leppla, and Jacqueline Courneene, and walking at her side was her personal guard, Kenneth Owens, Donald Brandt, Glenn Lindstrom, and Don Frederickson. She was then crowned by Captain A. P. Jones, U. S. army, Milwaukee, and when the queen waved her sceptre, the show began.

The novelty number, "Man About Town," a solo by Jon Flanagan really stole the show, when he displayed some fancy spills, turns, jumps and some marvelous fancy skating. Then later when he and Louis LaChapelle put in their appearance in "Gozon and Gazelle" the audience literally raised the roof, and demanded a second appearance of the two acrobats. Even Mickey, Mayor Sam Wickman's seeing-eye dog appreciated the brilliant stunts, getting so excited that Mr. Wickman had quite a time quieting him.

"Nonsensicalities," with Tony and Pete, clever bit of comedy of the organ grinder and his monkey was a big hit with the skating fans.

The Cadets, with Mary Lou Kessler acting as drum major, leading a dozen skaters on dress parade was a splendid example of the work Mrs. Hildur Turnquist has done toward making the frolics a big uccess. The girls, dressed in red outfits and each wearing a tall red hat, skated, with military precision that showed many hours of hard drill and work. Miss Kessler displayed very well her ability with the baton as she gave a solo demonstration of some fancy capers on the ice.

The program ended with the grand finale, the whole cast making an appearance, and the band playing the Star Spangled Banner.

The music was furnished by the Delta county unit of the Michigan music project, Cecil Collins directing.

The Winter Frolics will continue tonight with a dance at the Coliseum, Saturday afternoon with the school derby, Saturday evening with a hockey game between the Menominee and Marinette crew and the Escanaba Hawks, and Sunday night with the masquerade skating and dancing party at the indoor rink.

The skating program was as follows:

Curb On Petitions For New Laws Up At Spring Election

Lansing, Feb 13 (AP)—The legislature voted today to submit to the voters in the April election proposals which would restrict the people's power to initiate constitutional amendments and to petition for legislation.

The house of representatives, by overwhelming majorities concurred in senate-approved joint resolutions which will place the constitutional amendments on the spring ballots.

The proposed amendments would demand that initiatory petitions be signed by "qualified and registered electors." A number of signatures equal to 10 per cent of the vote cast for all candidates for governor in the preceding general election would be required on petitions submitting constitutional amendments. The number of signatures for initiatory legislation proposals would be fixed at eight per cent of the total vote for governor.

Tourist Funds Approved

Election officials have said the requirement that petition signers be registered and qualified voters was much more stringent than the present wording of the constitution, which permits "legal voters" to sign.

The amendments also would permit election officials to scrutinize petitions to determine whether all of the signatures were valid, an act now specifically forbidden by the Constitution.

Rep. Ate Dykstra, Republican, Grand Rapids, launched in the house a joint resolution to submit in April, or at a subsequent election, a proposed constitutional amendment granting Wayne county up to 25 seats in the house of representatives. It would restrict Wayne to not more than 25 per cent of the house seats.

The house adopted and returned to the senate for conference in amendments a bill appropriating $325,000 for the biennium to advertise Michigan's tourist and agricultural advantages. It was amended to require tourist and agricultural associations benefitting under its terms to submit a detailed statement of their expenditures before receiving state subsidy .

Rep. F. Jack Neller, Republican, Battle Creek, waged an unsuccessful fight to have the funds withheld until the new fiscal year opens July 1. He asserted the associations still have $60,000 remaining from their last appropriation.

A bill permitting the department of state to keep photographic records of automobile license documents, and to declare the documents legal evidence in a court of law, was adopted and sent to the governor for signature.

Utilities Race To Meet Defense Needs for Power

BY FRANK I. WELLER

Washington, Feb. [illegible] (AP)—The greatest utilities race of all time is under way in this country to keep the supply of electric power sufficiently ahead of demand to prevent possible blackouts in national defense industries.

To some it seems incredible that a country with more actual and potential public and private power combined than any other in the world suddenly should find itself hard pressed to stay abreast a demand it normally far exceeds.

But, officials say, factories unable to obtain maximum power for production are losing government contracts to more fortunate competitors and in some concentrated areas power producers have brought into use all their standby equipment to meet rising commercial demands.

3½ Million in 3 Years

Authorities report the average monthly demand for all purposes jumped from 9,000,000,000 kilowatts in 1937 to almost 12,500,000,000 last year and now is rising almost ten per cent annually. The national demand increased 1,153,000,000 kilowatts between August, 1939, and August, 1940—an amount equal to the average monthly demand in Pennsylvania or California and three times that of New Jersey.

Government power experts say the gains are phenomenal and have resulted in new highs of supply and demand running neck and neck at a faster clip even than during the first World War. They say the present monthly demand of 12,500,000,000 kilowatts offsets the estimated public and private combined, annual, capacity of 150,000,000,000 kilowatts.

There is, in addition to constantly increasing demand for everyday uses, a mounting power requirement for construction of ships, airplanes, tanks and guns in factories from New York to Seattle and from Detroit to Galveston. More and more electric energy is demanded for dynamos, drills, machine tools and conveyor belts.

The Tennessee Valley Authority, with all its tremendous resources, recently notified the Aluminum Company of America that the firm could not increase its purchase of TVA power until the Authority could expand its plants. Congress subsequently appropriated funds for additional power dams.

Biggest Since 1930

The Edison Electric Institute says private power companies are embarking upon the greatest construction program since the previous record year of 1930, with projects costing nearly $700,000,000 planned. They spent about $600,000,000 last year.

Federal Power Commission authorities say private companies generally are increasing their peak load potentials where they have reason to believe that future demand will justify the capital investment. Some, however, have been reluctant to go all-out on expansion which some day might leave them with costly equipment they cannot use.

It was expressly to evaluate local supply and demand factors for these latter operators that President Roosevelt a short time ago appointed Thomas R. Tate, Gas and Electric Research Division, as head of the federal power defense unit. Tate is working with private experts to map a direct and comprehensive blueprint of probable and possible power supply and demand. He expects to make an early report to the White House and to the National Defense Commission.

Motivating Tate's anticipated contribution to the general store of advance defense information, officials say, is the administration's determination that this time no such power shortage as developed during the last war shall catch this country unaware.

May Coordinate Systems

This government is endeavoring to prepare against all contingencies by preparing in advance for all reserve power facilities under all conditions. To this end Leland Olds, the FPC chairman, is holding a series of conferences with public and private operators and the National Power Policy committee.

The discussions are confidential, but informed persons say a major item of discussion is whether they should undertake establishment of a high-capacity transmission interconnecting system to link areas producing defense materials.

Olds says this suddenly may become necessary since an additional 5,000,000 kw of installed capacity is needed now for national defense against about 5,500,000 kw on order but not immediately available.

To meet at least a part of this requirement, he proposes that the plan, if adopted, should interconnect and coordinate systems covering 25 of the 48 areas into which the country has been subdivided for the purpose of hooking-up regional power supplies in an emergency. He argues that it would permit deficit areas instantly to call on surplus areas merely by throwing a switch, and would save $50,000,000 a year compared with the cost of new equipment.

Some private operators agree, but others dislike the resemblance to the controversial national power "grid" proposal by which public and private power resources would have been linked, possibly under federal control. The "grid" idea has been dropped temporarily, officials say, pending outcome of President Roosevelt's renewed plea for the long-contemplated Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway power project.

Olds says shortages now exist in the Niagara Falls and Detroit areas which could be remedied by the proposed power hook-up. Alfred C. Marshall, president and general manager of Detroit Edison, however, says equipment there will carry "with credit" any loads likely to be required within the next two years.

The Edison Electric Institute adds that it does not fear a power shortage in defense factories this soon except in isolated situations.

No Deficiency Yet

Private operators told the National Power Policy Committee a year ago that the prospective deficiency then did not exceed 3,220,000 kw of installed capacity and that this would be made up within two years.

Government estimates average almost twice that amount. Its engineers still say there is a flaw in private calculations. Many officials suggest the argument be settled by establishment of an "electric transmission agency" within the governmental set-up but which would finance itself by selling its bonds to the public.

Such an agency, they say, would be controlled jointly by the government and private interests. President Roosevelt so long ago as December 4, 1940, told a Press conference that he might favor such a plan. Its friends say that Congress, which would have to authorize it, would be much more likely to favor the plan over various others since the issue of debentures would not add to the huge public debt.

Members of Congress close to the power problem say that government invasion of the bitterly contested hydro-electric field in recent years plus defense imponderables for both public and private producers has created a near fantastic situation.

REA Important

Latent fires doubtless remain, they say, but much of the battle heat has died down in the common effort to serve national requirements which, happily for both sides, promises business enough for all. The calm of today contrasts sharply with the fierce court fights of a few years ago, the most memorable of which was Wendell L. Willkie's campaign to protect his Commonwealth & Southern Utilities against TVA encroachment.

More than 1,000,000 farms have been electrified since 1935 and today rural electrification plants have been notably effective as standby service for widely scattered small factories sub-contracting defense orders under the National Defense Commission's program of decentralizing industries as was done in England. One is the Portland Carburetor Company at Portland, Mich.

This Is How Your New Army Spends Its Money on Pay Day

Uncle Sam's new draftees are getting their first pays these days, and if you think even $21 a month isn't appreciated then take a look at the smiles on the faces in the picture at left. These photos were made at Camp Bowie, Brownwood, Tex., as 16,000 soldiers and 8000 workmen received $1,250,000 first time the ghost walked at the camp. Officers' pay accounted for a good share of the money. And the officers used the money for such prosaic things as haircuts. But not the new soldiers. They had themselves a time . . . some drank soda pop . . . some danced to juke box music . . . all spent money.

The officers get haircuts . . .

The youngsters drink soda pop . . .

The gay blades dance.

Michigan Hotel Association Will Meet In Marquette

Marquette, Mich.—The 30th annual winter meeting of the U. P. Development Bureau Officers and Directors will be held here February 20 and 21, in conjunction with the annual regional meeting of the Michigan Hotel Men's Association. The joint affair is sponsored by the Marquette Chamber of Commerce.

The meeting will open Thursday, February 20, at 10 a. m., with a defense conference session in the Marquette city hall auditorium. This session will be followed by a midday luncheon at the Northland Hotel. Abbott M. Fox of Iron Mountain, the Bureau's President, will be chairman. Speakers will be Don Weeks of Traverse City, member of the Michigan Defense Commission; and H. C. Timberlake of Minneapolis, manager of the Industrial Co-Ordination Department, Federal Reserve Bank ninth district. Both will discuss the angles of federal defense activities potentially affecting Michigan's Upper Peninsula. The luncheon session should be over by 3 p. m.

Bureau and hotel men and friends will join in a banquet at the Northland at 6:30 p. m. Wm. L. Burns of Ironwood, first vice president of the Bureau, will be chairman. Reminiscences will be presented by Hon. Frank P. Sullivan of Sault Ste. Marie, who presided over the Bureau's first meeting at Menominee, February 20, 1911, exactly 30 years ago. President Fox will discuss "The Bureau Today," and "Looking to the Future" will be the subject of an address of W. S. Woodfill, proprietor of the Grand Hotel, Mackinac Island, and a former president of the Michigan Hotel Men's Ass'n.

The annual winter business meeting of Bureau Officers and Directors will be held in the city hall auditorium Friday morning, February 21, at 9:30 o'clock with Mr. Fox presiding. The usual order of business will prevail and there will be several brief addresses. A midday luncheon at the Clifton Hotel will close the Bureau sessions, and Harry W. Mertins of Iron River, second vice president, will be chairman. Speakers will include Frederick Schouman, state information officer, WPA, Lansing; D. L. Clanahan, U. P. Crops Specialist, Marquette; Paul Barrett, Michigan State College, East Lansing; and F. P. Struhsaker, Department of Conservation, Lansing. The meeting will close with a message by President Fox.

C. M. Luce, of Grand Rapids, president of the Michigan Hotel Association, will be chairman at a round-table discussion Friday afternoon for members of the association and other hotel operators. Those attending will meet in the Lake Superior dining room of the Northland Hotel at 3 o'clock.

Marquette's annual winter carnival will be staged February 21 and 22. Many people attending the above meetings will stay over for the carnival, and for the annual international ski tournament at Suicide Hill, Ishpeming, Sunday, February 23.

Retail Lumbermen Meet In Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Wis.—With building prospects for 1941 more promising than they have been in a decade, lumber and building material dealers of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan will discuss advertising programs, merchandising methods and other things that influence their business activity, at the fifty-first annual convention of the Wisconsin Retail Lumbermen's Association here Feb. 18-20.

Methods of adapting the business to a national defense economy and adjusting business methods to the new order are problems that will bring the dealers to the convention for advice and information. The Association has contributed to the development of the low cost housing program and is alert to do its part in averting a housing shortage resulting from expanding defense industries.

Discussions of new sources of business will include the market being developed on the farm as the result of the movement of city people to the country, as well as the trend that induces farmers to retire on their farms and erect a second home to accommodate the son or a tenant. Asserting that the home is shelter, security and stability for a man and his family, the dominant theme selected for the convention is that "the only real security is a home of your own."

Newspaper advertising and building pages have done much to educate the public about new and improved building materials and their application, President C. S. Walker, Columbus, Wis., pointed out. The dealer is looked to for advice in adapting the new and better things and ideas to the customer's building and remodeling problems. This phase of the business will also receive attention on the program and at the building material exposition at the convention. Exhibits will be interesting and educational to both large and small dealers, from cities as well as rural areas. Last year's attendance record of 3,217 is expected to be equalled, bringing members from every community in Wisconsin and many from northern Michigan.

How Fayette Got Name; Old Days On Peninsula

Among the things you never knew 'til now, being dug up in a county and state-wide inventory of Michigan tourist attractions, may be such items as these:

About Fayette — Under the name of Snail Shell harbor this spot toward the tip of the Garden peninsula was well known to sailors who found in the deep, smooth waters a sure refuge.

10,000 Tons a Year

On June 6, 1848, the Jackson Iron Co. was organized. On Dec. 6, 1866, this company bought 16,000 acres of heavily timbered land on this point and it is supposed that the harbor was purchased at the same time.*

The name of the company's general agent, "Fayette" Brown was given to the location.

In May, 1867, the building of the company's smelting furnace was begun and on Christmas day of the same year, the first iron was "run". In 1870, the second stack was completed and the output increased from 5,000 tons to more than 10,000 tons annually.

The company owned seven sets of huge, beehive shaped charcoal kilns on this point, also some in Garden, and they brought coal from the Isabella side.

The ore was brought to Fayette by boat and the iron in the form of "pigs" was shipped out, also by boat. A news clipping of 1867 stated: "Some 2,700 tons of pig iron have been shipped from here during the past week, the Danforth alone carrying 1,300 tons."

Good Time by All

Midway up the furnace hill a road led off to the right and continued up the slope. On this high ground a race track was laid out, to the joy of lovers of fine horses. This too was the picnic ground and later the baseball field. The gently rising ground at the back with its great virgin maples afforded a natural grand stand for observers.

No saloon was permitted at the location other than the bar in connection with the hotel. After a loyal workman had been disabled he was permitted to open a tavern about a mile up on the Garden road.

About 1890 the furnace closed. By 1892 most of the equipment had been moved away and the employees scattered. The magnificent plant was abandoned after less than 25 years of operation.

Those who lived and worked at the furnace generally agreed that the company was far ahead of its time in it's care and consideration for employees. Few claim that much money was made for the owners, but a general good time was had.

*(While the Harbor itself is not mentioned in the notes I have, we know that it was owned by one H. D. G. Squires and that it was sold by him to the Company at just about the time the other land was bought.)

St. Martin's Island

St. Martin's was satisfactory as a commercial fishing base and two settlements were made, one on each side of the island. A schoolhouse was built midway between the two towns and the cemetery was near this road.

On November 2, 1871 the island became the township of Winona and so continued as long as people remained on the island. The census of 1880 gave it a population of ony 78 and listed two farms. The Durham cattle from one of these farms were brought to the mainland for dispersal to the betterment of local heads.

After the drowning of one of their young men, when skating from the mainland, the people became restless and by the middle of the '80's they had moved away, many to Fairport and others to Escanaba, and some to Sack Bay.

To Be Published

The U. S. Lighthouse and Fog Signal were established there on April 15, 1905.

(This information was gathered by Adelle Elliott, local historian of the Garden Peninsula. Similar notes on scenic and historical points are being gathered for all other Delta county townships in a recreational survey, which centers here in the office of E. A. Wenner, county agricultural agent. Eventually this data will be published in book form.)

Cosmic rays travel with the speed of light—186,000 miles per second.

Tropical Bermuda is located only 765 miles from Nova Scotia, 1040 miles from Miami.

Michigan Mirror

Doings About Capitol

State Capitol, Lansing — Stalwart partisans who take their politics seriously and who, likewise, believe devoutly in party responsibility, find Michigan's 1941 state government to be downright disturbing.

The "good old days," verily, are slipping fast into memories.

Whether for good or bad, better or worse, we are headed in a new direction, come what may. As every action brings a reaction, as the pendulum swings invariably from one side to another, so Michigan is undergoing a significant change.

And it is all the result of a steady trend in public opinion—how we look at things.

Independence

When voters went to the polls last November, they did not act deliberately with cool, calm foresight to create today's bi-partisan rule at Lansing.

They merely voted for their favorites.

Privileges of a democracy made it possible for them to choose simultaneously three Republicans (secretary of state, attorney general, and auditor general), and two Democrats (governor and state treasurer), while maintaining a Republican majority in each branch of the state legislature. And that's scrambling 'em a bit!

And yet the old-fashioned idea of putting one cross in one circle at the top of the ballot has been fading in Michigan for the past decade or so. A decisive bloc of independent voters crossed party lines exactly five times between 1930 and 1940 to elect a new governor at each election. Every two years, as a result of this flexible public opinion, old "rascals" would be turned out at Lansing and new "rascals" would be put in.

F. D. R.'s New Deal

At Washington in 1933 a truly political phenomenon occurred.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt began his famous "New Deal" with the aid of Republican Harold Ickes as secretary of the interior and Republican Henry Wallace as secretary of agriculture.

In New York City a dynamic coalition candidate by the name of Fiorella H. La Guardia upset an entrenched Tammeny.

Arthur Vandenberg, a man who has never been a politician in the true sense of the word and who has not been actively identified with party organization, became one of our outstanding independent leaders in the United States senate. The primary system, originally conceived as a remedy for boss-plagued conventions, paved the way.

In 1939 the voters of Michigan upheld in referendum a non-partisan judiciary, a reaction against a so-called political judiciary.

In 1940 the same voters stripped the legislature of its patronage powers and instituted a drastic and somewhat revolutionary program of civil service, jobs by merit.

Gymnastics

Concurrently, the independent voters in 1940 performed other mental gymnastics just as remarkable.

They cast a majority for Wendell L. Willkie, who was a lifelong Democrat until recently. They cast a majority also for Murray D. Van Wagoner.

Never in its history had the Republican party broke precedent nationally by crossing party line in its selection of a presidential candidate. The man, not the emblem, proved to be the irresistible magnet.

But this change in political thinking has not been the exclusive virtue (or sin, depending on how you look at it) of any one party. Witness these acts: The late Governor Frank Fitzgerald appointed a study commission for civil service, and his successor, Frank Murphy, signed the legislative act. Governor Murphy then appointed a study commission to recommend reforms in parole and prison management, and when a Democratic legislature provided for a bi-partisan commission, Republicans did not move to revise it.

Bi-Partisan Trend

Today's current dispute over bi partisan appointment of the state commissioner of agriculture is just another case at point.

An administration measure would take the commissioner out of politics through appointment by a long-term bi-partisan commission. Counter to this Van Wagoner farm reform is a McPherson-sponsored bill for the commissioner's appointment by the state board of agriculture, Michigan State college's elective governing body.

Also being kicked around at Lansing is the idea of letting bi-partisan boards appoint the state highway commissioner and the state superintendent of public instruction.

A 1941 legislative bill would have regents of the University of Michigan elected by non-partsian ballots.

And so the signs multiply.

Michigan's bi-partisan administration appears to be, in part, the culmination of a trend of popular thinking that has disregarded party labels in an insistent quest for more efficient and responsive government. What will be the voters' reaction to this? That answer is yet to be written.

Sunflower Heads Are Feeding Birds

Shingleton — Sunflower heads sticking above the snow, and the standing corn and soybeans available to game birds near Cusino wildlife experiment station this winter are furnishing a test of winter grain feeding of sharptails and prairie chickens, in wild areas.

Eight experimental plots planted on abandoned farmland average an acre apiece. Buckwheat was cut and field peas were pulled and stacked on platforms to dry, and remain available above the snow. Value of such food patches for increasing the abundance of sharptails and prairie chickens for hunters is much debated.

Draft Law Should Be Revised, Says Villard

By Oswald Garrison Villard

Washington, D. C.—Already it is plain that the conscription law will have to be revised at this session of Congress. Its relatively hasty adoption, as a result of the efforts of a pressure group of rich men in New York, plus President Roosevelt's sudden change of mind about it, affords clear proof that haste makes not only for waste, but inefficiency in national defense. It will be recalled that the army announced that it would have hundreds of thousands of men in the army and being trained by the first of December. That was obviously impossible because there were no barracks available. Actually, on the first of February the selective service officials reported that although they are in a position to supply the army with two and one-half millions of physically fit young men within ten days, only about 100,000 men had then been inducted into the service, less than one-half of the 240,000 scheduled when the army finally got down to facing the situation with an eye to realities. Moreover, while the schedule calls for 160,000 more men in February, actually not more than 100,000 men will be inducted.

"Monumental Blunder"

Thus the delay has been due to the army and not to any failure of the selective service officials. Undoubtedly by summer, when men can again be put into tents, the process of expanding the army can be greatly hastened. Whether the military equipment will be available is not so clear, but it is to be hoped that by that time it will be or the men will be wasting their time. The army says that in general health conditions are better in army camps than in the neighboring communities despite the fact that many men have been kept in tents during this winter. Reports received from some sources say that the enrolled men are not happy or enthusiastic and that the bulk of them are being given the same old fours-right and fours-left and drilling that has been the regular routine of the army for all time. It is too early yet to know whether a system of recruit and regimental training can be worked out comparable to that of the Germans, or even the English. The majority of the company officers of the new organizations are reserve officers, graduates of military schools and the R. O. T. C. units in the civilian colleges. Some of these are efficient, especially those who have had now a number of years service in the C. C. C. camps, but many are inadequately prepared from the European point of view. The new regimental officers are, of course, being drawn from the regular army. It is all a stupendous task.

Now as for the law itself, many army experts say that its constitutes a "monumental blunder." It is so defective that there is no provision as to the men who are passing out of the group by reaching the age of thirty-six, and it leaves the status of the 1,300,000 young men who become twenty-one each year "almost nebulous." The President could of course order the registration of the latter group, but if he does these young men will be placed behind the existing men now registered; that is, they will be preceded by 16,000,000 men. Obviously it would be years before they would be reached. This alone proves that the talk about the selective service being the only fair method of defending the country is nonsense.

4,000,000 Not Necessary For Defense

Again, Congress is getting extremely restless because the machinery of the selective draft is already costing $20,000,000 a year to maintain. The American Legion is now boldly demanding that the classification of men from twenty-one to thirty-six be done away with and that instead men aged nineteen to twenty-two be the victims of the draft. There is considerable justice in this since at nineteen most young men are about entering college or business and could therefore give a year to the government with the least difficulty and loss to themselves. Indeed, Colonel Harry C. Kramer, who drafted the selective service law as it was before it went to Congress where it was much changed, favors taking our youth at eighteen on the ground that this would interfere least with their careers and provide a maximum of trained men subsequently available for military service in an emergency.

Undoubtedly, if we are going to imitate the dictators and have conscription which Americans in the past have hated and deemed absolutely impossible in the United States, we might as well take a leaf out of the German and French book and take all youths who reach a given age, whether eighteen, nineteen or twenty. That would be the simplest to administer, would be automatic, would not need the present great bureaucracy to administer it, and, as I have said, would make the least demand upon the drafted men. It is to be hoped that if the law is changed the requirement that every trained man shall be compulsorily placed in the reserve for six years and called out for occasional training will be done away with. There again is a great unfairness. If a man enlists in the regular army today and serves one or three years he does not have to go into the reserve. The conscript who comes out and wants to go on with his education or his life's work must be aware for six years that at any moment the government may make him put on his uniform again, though millions of other young men will not thus be liable.

Above all, the Congress ought really to decide how many men the United States needs to train; the army's demand for 4,000,000 is preposterous. We had to call for ships of fourteen nations as well as our own to move 2,000,000 men to France and we did not wholly maintain them when they got there. If we are not going to try to fight abroad we need nothing like 4,000,000 men. Personally I still believe, with many army officers, that conscription was entirely uncalled for and is today unnecessary adequately to defend the United States.

The battle of Big Horn, in which General Custer and his men were massacred, occurred on June 25, 1876.

RAILROAD QUIZ

What do the different locomotive whistles mean?

The standard code of operating rules, in force throughout the United States, prescribes many engine whistle signals, of which the following are extensively used:

Approaching public grade crossing—Two long, one short, one long.

Approaching station, junction or railroad crossing—One long.

Alarm for persons or animals on track—Succession of short toots.

Apply brakes, stop—One short whistle.

Release brakes, proceed—Two long whistles.

Flagman protect rear of train—One long, three short.

Flagman return from west or south—Four long.

Flagman return from east or north—Five long.

Call for signals—Four short.

Back up (when standing)—Three short.

Stop at next station (when running)—Three short.

What do the various bell-cord signals means?

Two shorts: When standing, start.

Two shorts: When running, stop at once.

Three shorts: When standing, back up.

Three shorts: When running, stop at next passenger station.

Four shorts: When standing, apply or release air brakes.

Four shorts: When running, reduce speed.

Five shorts: When standing, recall flagman.

Five shorts: When running, increase speed.

Six shorts: When running, increase train heat.

One long: When running, brakes sticking; look back for hand signals.

What are the standard hand, flag and lantern signals in railway train service?

A hand, flag or lantern swung across the track means stop; held horizontally at arm's length, reduce speed; raised and lowered vertically, proceed; swung vertically in a circle at half arm's length across track, back up; swung horizontally above head, when standing, apply air brakes; held at arm's length above head, when standing, release air brakes.

What is remote control in railway operations?

Remote control is a term used to designate the control, usually by electricity, of railway signals, switches and other devices from a tower room or other point located some distance away from the actual scene of train operations. A remote control system may be confined to a yard or terminal, or it may apply to main-line operations over more than 100 miles of road.

Have casualties at railway-highway grade crossings been reduced?

The number of persons who met death in highway-grade crossing accidents in the United States was reduced from 2,568 in 1928 to 1,398 in 1939. The number of casualties per 10,000 motor vehicles registered was reduced in the same period from 3.42 to 1.61.

Are many accidents at highway-railway grade crossings caused by automobiles running into the sides of trains?

Thirty-six out of every 100 automobile accidents at highway-railway grade crossings in 1939 were due to automobiles running into the sides of trains.

How much would it cost to separate all railway-highway grade crossing in the United States?

The average cost of eliminating grade crossings by the construction of underpasses or overhead bridges is in the neighborhood of $85,000 each. Since there are 231,400 grade crossings in the country, the total cost of separating all grades would be in the neighborhood of $19,700,000,000. This is equal to about three-fourths of the total railway investment in the United States.

How many trespassers on railway property are fatally injured in a year?

The number of trespassers killed ranged from 2,352 to 2,892 annually during the 16-year period ended December 31, 1939.

What is the safety record of the railroads with reference to the transportation of explosives?

Approximately 500,000,000 pounds of high explosives, including dynamite, black and smokeless powder, explosive ammunition and blasting caps, were transported by the railroads of the United States in 1939 without accident, death or injury. This was the thirteenth consecutive year in which the railroads hung up a perfect safety record in the handling of explosives.

In what research activities are the railroads engaged?

More than 170 technical committees of the Association of American Railroads are at work on numerous problems in connection with railroad operations in efforts to reduce operating costs, increase safety and bring about further improvements in plant, equipment and service. Many individual railroads are conducting independent research with the same objects in view.
